BANDITS KILL OFFICER

TWO SUSPECTED IN KING DEATH

NEW YORK, March 19.—Lives of two men were inseparably tangled with that of the murdered "Broadway butterfly"—Dorothy Keenan or King—authorities believed this afternoon.

One of these men was at the top of the gay white way, reputed a millionaire, a patron of the arts who befriended the prettylittle artist's model and gave her expensive gifts.

The other lived among the shadows cast just beyond the pale by the bright lights where Dorothy Keenan danced; a narcotic addict who preyed upon defenseless girls.

One of the two killed Dorothy Keenan, crushing her rounded arms in a merciless grip while pressing chloroform soaked cotton to her nose, the authorities now believe as their search for the murderer narrows down.

If it was the wealthy admirer, they say, he slew the girl to get back letters he had written in moments of heedless passion; if it was the "grifter," skulking up the stairs while the elevator boy was absent, who murdered Dorothy Keenan, he sought the jewels the rich admirer had showered upon her—but, more than this, he had to have her silence.

The model knew things damaging to both these suspects.

One or the other (a strange feature of the case is that both are believed to have visited her that night) murdered her as she struggled vainly in her silken night gown, ransacked the flat and fled.

WRITES FINIS TO A ROMANCE

NEWARK, N. J., March 19.—Charges of kidnaping against John H. Ellis, private detective, were dismissed today in Judge Fred Stickel's court, thus writing a finis to a tale of romance which attracted the whole country's attention.

Ellis was alleged to have kidnaped Alexander E. Robertson, former British soldier, who was a suitor of Miss Mary Culberson, daughter of the former Texas senator of that name.

Robertson alleged Ellis and two other men took him to Boston and tried to make him leave the country aboard ship.

The kidnaping indictment was dismissed on motion of J. Henry Harrison, special prosecutor, following a conference of Judge Stickel and attorneys for both sides.

FEDERAL COURT TO TAKE UP BREAD LAW

Suspended Statute Now to Get an Airing in Supreme Court at Washington With Legal Barrier Removed.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—The supreme court today agreed to pass upon the question as to whether the Nebraska state legislature can fix the maximum as well as the minimum weight of a loaf of bread, provided there is no statutory provision in the state against substituting the present governor of the state as a party to the suit in place of the former governor.

The law is being fought by the Jay Burns Baking company of Omaha.

C. L. Dort, assistant attorney general who has handled the bread case, said Monday when informed of the decision that there is no statute in Nebraska against the subscription suggested, and he took it to mean that the court will hear the appeal.

The state supreme court upheld the law, but it is suspended by the appeal to Washington.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 19.—The name of Mayor Rosewell Johnson of Gary, one of sixty-three defendants on trial in federal court charged with conspiracy to violate prohibition laws was brought into the case prominently by government witnesses for the first time today.

George Winkler, chief of federal prohibition agents, testified that last November he warned Johnson that John C. Mullen, police sergeant, was selling liquor at the Mullen hotel.

"Johnson said he didn't doubt it and would investigate," Winkler said. "Mullen is still a member of the police force."

Two witnesses testified that liquor was sold at a hotel owned by Mullen. Charles McPherson said on one occasion he saw City Judge William Dunn in the place talking to a man and that a bottle of whisky was on the desk between them.

MODERN HOG HOUSE OWNED BY JEFFERSON COUNTY MAN

FAIRBURY, Neb., March 19.—J. L. Kennedy, a practical farmer living near Fairbury, is just completing a modern hog house, which is attracting much attention, as it is the only one of its kind in Jefferson county.

The building is nearly all cement, size 24x50 ft. The sides are five foot high and the roof is melon or round shape. The walls and the top are 8 inches thick, consisting of 4 thin walls of cement with a 4 inch air space, two walls of the cement mixture on either side of the air chamber. The dead air space prevents the interior from becoming cold and damp.

Between the two outside crusts of cement there is a lining of heavy tar paper to add to the warmth of the structure. The crusts of the wall are stuck on metal lath and the top in addition is reinforced by heavy iron rods extending over the top a foot apart.

The cement floor is covered with a plank floor constructed of 2 inch planks for warmth. The building is amply lighted with 24 windows 18x32 inches covered with hail screen. Sixteen of these are on the roof on the south side of the dome and the others on the south side of the house, which furnishes plenty of sunshine and warmth in winter.

The inside is divided in sixteen apartments, eight on a side with an 8 ft. feeding alley between. The building is wired for electricity and the total cost, Mr. Kennedy states, is less than $500.00

MAN DIES FROM LONG FALL

CHICAGO, March 19.—John Pieklow was instantly killed today when he leaped from a sixth floor window at the county hospital.

The Intellectuals.

E. W. Howe's Monthly: New York is a queer town, and many queer things go on there. Just at present it is this: A company of Russian actors is appearing there in one of Gorki's plays, and packing houses nightly. The players speak their native language; and, of all languages, Russian is least understood in New York, and least agreeable. The play by Gorki is suggestive, filthy, horirble, but men and women who know no Russian stand in line for hours to secure tickets. The Russian players are not very capable, I am informed: there is no excuse for seeing them, as there was for seeing Bernhardt present "Camille" in a strange tongue. The attractive thing about the Russian play seems to be that it is something new; a new fad. If I should go to New York this month, probably I should engage in the riot which goes on daily to secure tickets to this Russian play: I should like to see it once, and determine how much of real interest there is in it. The manager of the play is a cunning man who secured great newspaper notoriety in advance. One story printed was that when it was presented in London, members of the nobility threw diamonds and money on the stage for the actors. The lesson imparted by the play is revolutionary: a defense of the present soviet regime in Russia. By means of tremendous advance advertising (all untrue, and supplied free by "capitalistic" newspapers) the cunning manager sold eighty thousand dollars' worth of tickets before his company opened in New York. Probably many of those who attend are inspired by the curiosity which would take me to see it; but it is said that without exception every critic in New York endorses it with tremendous enthusiasm. One man is quoted as saying: "At last! What the world has been waiting for has happened: a perfect play." Probably most of those who attend are cranks, like this critic, for certainly the play is worthless (according to the sane man who has seen it). My informant hires many actors, and says he would not submit to the performance of anyone in the Russian company. Is it not significant that such a company, presenting such plays, should break all attendance records in New York? This is the doing of what is called the intellectuals: this is a victory for the dirty Greenwich village crowd. It is an insult to the millions of decent people who do the best they can, and hide as far as possible all human acts like those depicted by the Russian players now stirring New York as it has never before been stirred with a play.

Robert was six feet seven and weighed two hundred pounds.

His first sweetheart was Helene. She never had had an idea in her little blonde head in all her sixteen years, but she looked like a doll and she was just as high as Robert's heart. Robert liked them little.

His next sweetheart was Ida Marie. She was dark and audacious, but Robert never minded, for she was petite and pretty. She could stand under Robert's outstretched arm.

Mignon came next. She had flame-colored hair and a fiery temper, but she barely reached to Robert's shoulder, so he saw no flaw in her.

Marguerite had mouse-colored hair and she was very, very shy, but Robert only saw that she was slim and small and he was satisfied.

Robert is married to Evelene Maude. Evelene Maude is five feet nine and no one knows her exact weight, tho it is close to two hundred.

Robert liked tiny women, but that had nothing to do with it; for you see Evelene Maude liked large men.—Town Topics.

The South American delegations backed the United States.

Mrs. Reisler herself sought to plead guilty during the investigation that followed. At the time both she and her son claimed to have done the murder.

Today Morris walked smilingly to the bar, pleaded guilty and was sentenced from twenty years to life. Indictments against his mother and the others were dropped. DOORN FAMILY LIFE HAPPY

Correspondent Sets at Rest Rumors About Dissension.

WILHELM'S WIFE INTERVIEWED

Pictures Congenial Companionship of the Pair.

Hermine Has No Intention of Leaving Kaiser, Except to Visit Her Sons—Her Children Respect Their Stepfather.

The first exclusive interview granted by the Princess Hermine, bride of ex-kaiser Wilhelm Hohenzollern, since her marriage, has been secured

Following is the first of a series of three stories in which the princess, largely in her own words, definitely sets at rest world wide reports of differences between herself and the ex-emperor, describes the intimate family home life at Castle Doorn, talks on politics and attacks former President Wilson.

Information obtained by the correspondent during his visit to the ex-kaiser's household at Doorn definitely established the truth regarding reports of an impending interesting event in the Hohenzollern family

By Ferdinand Jahn.

DOORN, Holland, March 19.—The family life of the former German kaiser and his kaiserin at Doorn castle is simple and happy.

The kaiserin—better known as Princess Hermine—made that emphatically clear in an exclusive interview.

The interview, which was given in the quaint miniature castle that is the residence of the court chamberlain, is the first the princess has granted since her wedding.

She dissipated emphatically all the chatter that has spread world-wide to the effect that she is leaving Wilhelm or going to Corfu. She made it plain that the ex-emperor and herself are pursuing in happiness and unity the simple life of studious, active folks, here in this picturesque out of the way corner of the world.

The love of the princess for the former kaiser and the love and respect her children accord their new father was much in evidence during my visit.

Explaining a forthcoming trip to Germany, the kaiserin said:

"At the end of this month I am going on an eight weeks' visit to Silesia.

Hard to Leave Wilhelm.

"You can believe me, it is hard for me to leave the emperor alone. But I am also a mother. And the interest sof my children demand my presence in Germany twice a year. These times naturally are so chosen that they coincide, in spring and autumn, with the vacations of my oldest sons, who are at school in Germany. Naturally these journeys are previously arranged."

The princess received me in the court chamberlain's offices which lie back from the winding Doorn road, in a setting reminiscent of an old Dutch print, or a glimpse of scenery of an operetta.

In this room last November, the princess was unted to the former emperor by the civil ceremony of marriage. The room's chief ornament is an enormous portrait of the ex-kaiser in the gorgeous uniform of the hussars, while on a writing table is a photograph of the ex-kaiser's first wife. Incidentally in other rooms of the castle there are many pictures of the dead empress.

The princess greeted me pleasantly. My first impression was that she fairly beamed with health, energy and the joy of living. She was plainly dressed in a blue costume with a seal jacket, small hat with a veil, dark cotton gloves, woolen stockings, and she carried a cane.

The three youngest of her children played about outside.

"My children quickly developed confidence in the kaiser and a liking for him," Hermine said. "And for his part, he treats them with fatherly tenderness. When my oldest boys are here, they help the emperor to chop wood.

"The emperor continues this occupation," she went on, "because since childhood he has been accustomed to plenty of exercise."

Wilhelm, she said, finds sawing and chopping wood a substitute for sports, with which to "preserve his physical elasticity."

"He also likes to help about the park and garden," Hermine added.

Then Hermine gave a glimpse of life within the castle, or herself and the former war lord by the fireside of an evening, pursuing diligently an intellectual life.

Interested in Culture.

"The emperor is actively interested in all branches of culture," she said. "Just at present he is busy on archaeological studies and on notes for a booklet he is preparing regarding Greek antiquities.

"The emperor also is proceeding earnestly with his meteorological studies and observations. He is strongly occupied, too, with theological studies. Only yesterday he sent a letter to Pastor Vogel at Potsdam in which he discussed theological problems.

Above all the kaiser follows politics, in which he naturally has the greatest interest

"We have introduced a sort of division of labor in view of the flood of new publications. Each of us reads a portion and reports to the other, hereupon we get together and draw conclusions.

"We read with special thoroness whatever we find written about the kaiser and his personality.

"And indeed we do not merely read the favorably judgments.

"Sometimes,"—the princess smiled significantly, "there is quite interesting reading."

KRAUS SENT TO HOSPITAL

FINALLY WINS VERDICT NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR MURDERS.

Totally Blind as Result of Efforts to Kill Himself, and If Cured of Insanity Walks in Darkness.

Rudolph Kraus, slayer of his wife and three children in Saline county, is now a patient at a Lincoln sanitarium, where he is being treated for insanity. The man is totally blind as a result of an effort to kill himself after he had slain the members of his family. If he is cured, his friends think of asking for admission to the school for the blind at Nebraska City.

The Krause case has been twice before the supreme court, and in addition to that he has had three trials before as many juries in Saline county. He resided on a farm near Tobias with his wife and two children. He was greatly addicted to drink, and just before the murder he had taken a considerable quantity of several kinds of liquor home with him. He had imbibed a lot of this, and while under its influence killed his wife and their two small children, laying their bodies in a row. Then he successively but unsuccessfully tried to kill himself by swallowing poison, using a razor and shooting himself in the head.

The man did not die, but the pistol bullet left him blind in both eyes. In defense he told a weird story to the effect that he believed his wife had tuberculosis—altho she did not have it—that he worried over the matter and took it to God, who told him that the proper thing to do was to kill all of them, including himself, and thus save them from suffering. He claimed he was crazy drunk at the time, and has been insane most of the time since, as the story goes.

Neither one of the first two juries tried him and sentenced him for life believed the story, but each time the supreme court reversed his conviction because of errors of the trial court. The county sent him to trial the third time, and recently the third jury rendered a verdict of not guilty. The man has spent the time since the murder either in the county jail or at the state penitentiary.

SHIPMAN WANTS PENSION

Veteran Fireman and Electrical Inspector Desires to Retire From Service April 1.

S. H. Shipman (Steve), member of the fire department and city electrical inspector, has asked the city council to place him on the retired list under the pension law, April 1. He has served twenty-one years, two months and two days. The law permits retirement on a pension of half of the salary which the recipient was receiving when he is retired In addition to a salary of $123.50 a month as a fireman, Mr. Shipman gets $25 a month as electrical inspector. His pay is a little more per month than a first class fireman because he is electrician for the department. The pension will be $61.50 per month The $25 extra per month is not figured in on the pension. Mr Shipman is forty nine years old.

Not including the new applicant, thirteen are now on the fire department pension roll, ten retired firemen, two for disability and one a widow, Mrs. Harry [illegible] Firemens' pensions now cost the taxpayers of the city $708.12 When a fireman dies, if he was married, does his widow or his children get the money

BROWN SAYS COURT ERRED

KIDNAPER TELLS TRIBUNAL HE HAD NO FAIR TRIAL.

Man Who Kept Police of Two States Busy Catching Him and Received a Life Sentence Seeks New Hearing.

Fred Brown, the undersized chap who kept the police of two states busy trying to catch him, tells the supreme court that he was not given a fair trial in Douglas county on the charge of kidnaping two girls, and in an appeal filed with that tribunal has asked that the judgment of guilty be set aside, along with the life sentence imposed on him by the trial court.

Brown has been identified by several men, including the warden, as Ernest Bush, who was sent to the institution for life for murder when he was sixteen and who was pardoned years ago. Brown laughs at this story, and says he is not the man at all.

In his appeal Brown's attorney sets out the usual list of errors that he thinks the trial court committed in the admission and barring of testimony and in the giving and refusing of instructions to the jury, declaring that his conviction was the result of passion and prejudice arising out of the spectacular pursuit and capture of defendant.

Kidnaping is a crime that carries a life penalty, and that is what Brown received. He was accused of having enticed two young women to the shack where he was staying on the outskirts of Omaha, there chained them and subjected them to all sorts of indignities. A man who came to their rescue was captured and also chained, but managed to get away. Brown formerly lived in Lincoln, and the authorities of both cities vainly tried to lay hands on him. He was identified on the streets here twice, but the bystanders had no desire to detain him. He was finally shot down in Wyoming, where he had an old hiding place. He claims the girls accompanied him of their own free will, but the jury did not believe him.

Brown has been in the state penitentiary for several months.

HEAR OF WORK AMONG BOYS

City Ministers Listen to Address of Y. M. C. A. Hi-Y Secretary on Citizenship Training.

Fourteen pastors were present for the meeting of the ministerial association, Monday morning. Rev. Ray Kearns of Fremont, who has been conducting services at Westminster Presbyterian, was present. The moderator was authorized to appoint a committee of three as a book committee to cooperate with the city librarian and recommend religious books for the library.

C. J. Vessey, secretary of boys' works for the Y. M. C. A. had charge of the program. He said his branch of work was more especially for boys between twelve and seventeen, as younger boys were cared for in the home. The religious education of the boy, he said, included all phases of his training. He spoke of the need for adequate equipment for the boys' activities in church or club rooms and of a Christian leader to carry out a Christian program.

A chart of the Christian citizenship training program was shown. Mr. Vessey said about 250 boys had been charted this year. The chart, he said, was a challenge to greater growth Each new boy is examined in four groups of questions, covering his intellectual training, physical training, devotional and service training. He is given an insignia to indicate his approximate marks. The tests in the program are for a course of three years.

WALSH ATTACKS WITNESSES

Defense Counsel for William Z. Foster Declares Prosecution's Men "Inaccurate and Improper."

ST. JOSEPH. Mich., March 19.—Prosecution witnesses in the trial of William Z Foster, charged with violation of the Michigan syndicalism law, are "inaccurate and improper," Frank P. Walhs, chief counsel for the defense, declared today.

Walsh launched his assault on "stoolpigeon methods of the state" in gathering evidence, as Maurice Wolff, federal agent, continued identification of radical literature seized in the raid at Bridgeman last fall which resulted in the indictment of seventy-six men and women.

"These witnesses are stoolpigeons," Walsh said. "Many of them have been active in inciting radicals among the labor parties to violence All of them are prejudiced."

Walsh's attack was also launched in anticipation of testimony by Francis Morrow, alias Ashworth, and "K-97," the government's undercover man at the Bridgeman meeting

SEVERE LOSS FROM STORM

MEMBERS OF LEGISLATURE GET WORD FROM HOME.

Representative Gallagher Receives Information That in Holt County Is Surpassed Storm of 1888.

Membersof the legislature who did not go home over the recess and storm period, are receiving direct information as to the storm's extent in their respective communities. Representative Donald Gallagher of Holt county, in a telephone communication with his mother, learned that in that northern strip of territory the storm was more severe than the historic blizzard of 1888. It was too early, according to this report, to determine the damage to cattle and possibly to human life. It is believed, according to Mr. Gallagher, that stock enroute to market were frozen to death in car load quantities. The maximum temperature at O'Neill was fourteen below.

Representative Thomssen of Alda, Hall county, started for Lincoln at 10 a m. Sunday. He reached this city at 11 p. m. He reported that there was less snow in the Grand Island territory than in Lincoln but that the wind to the west had greater velocity and the suffering was more acute. The snow was fine and whipped thru small cracks. Mr. Thomssen assumes that the loss to hog raisers may run into big figures since this is the commencement of the farrowing season. It was five below zero in Hall county, according to this member.

Repersentative Keifer, stockman of Nuckolls county, returned Monday morning with an optimistic report. He said that in his community, all trains are running and that there was no considerable loss to livestock from teh storm.

It was predicted, however, that several members living on branch lines north and west might not get in for the Monday afternoon session.

HARYR BABCOCK ARRAIGNED

Arraigned Monday With Blaine Hunt and Bound Over on Liquor Conspiracy Charge.

Hunt, 334 South Thirteenth, a partner in the University Cleaners, were bound over to the federal grand jury Monday morning on charges of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act. Their bonds were fixed at $1,000 and Babcock gave bond. Hunt was taken to jail.

The two were arrested Saturday night by police and state officers acting in conjunction, at the Burlington depot, where they were caught loading a cargo of liquor into Babcock's automobile. The car, a Hudson, was confiscated by the government, together with several gallons of hooch.

FOR WIDENING J STREET

City Council Asked to Create Improvement District—Fire Committee Recommends.

Mayor Zehrung said he would submit to the city council Monday afternoon the request of the city planning division committee of the chamber of commerce to create an improvement district on J street from Sixteenth to Thirty-third streets. The committee requested that J street be widened to 100 feet from Sixteenth to Twenty-seventh street and Twenty-seventh street to Thirty-third street to such a width as the council approved.

The recommendations of the fire prevention committee of the chamber were also to be submitted. They are sudden and excessive water pressure which causes the breaking of the water mains, and to prevent hereafter the breaking down of a portion of the water plant equipment at the A street water station.

The committee invites serious consideration in the matter of the presence of highly combustable merchandise stocks in buildings in the center of the business section of the city. It indicated that particular attention should be given to such buildings as are used for dwellings. It tenders its services to the council in conducting a campaign to reduce the fire hazard.

REFUGEE FED BABIES.

COLORADO SPRINGS, March 19.—"Community sings" are peculiar things," says R. O. Mitchell, leader of community sings in the Pike's Peak region. For instance lots of people go to these sings and then don't warble a note, he says. And at luncheons given by various clubs, "stunt" songs are in demand, arther than old time melodies or the popular airs. When the women get together for a sing, and there are no men present, the favorite airs are the old love songs of long ago, according to Mitchell.

FICTION IN SECOND PLACE.

BOSTON, March 19.—The use of party line telephones to relay radio concerts to those who have no radios of their own is a problem which has confronted the telephone companies since the advent of the wireless telephone. This was revealed when the New England Telephone and Telegraph company notified its subscribers that excessive use of telephones would be sufficient cause for discontinuing service.

LOWER WANTS TO GO HIGHER

ASKING SUPREME COURT TO FIX BOND FOR AN APPEAL.

Attorney Here to Urge Action So That He May Go to the Federal Supreme Court on Saving Clause Question.

The supreme court having overruled the application of Ray A. Lower, former cashier of the Valparaiso State bank, found guilty of embezzlement, is now being asked by Mr O'Sullivan, attorney for Lower, to take the necessary steps that will allow him to appeal to the federal supreme court.

Mr. O'Sullivan has asked the court to fix a bond for his client's appearance so that he may take his appeal and yet remain out of prison. The trial court had sentenced him to a total of forty-two years, seven years on each of six counts.

It is claimed by O'Sullivan that the supreme court erred when it held that the fact that the legislature, when it amended the embezzlement statute, failed to put in a clause that would have kept alive all pending prosecutions against the law did not act as a legislative pardon to all accused under the old law. He says that this deprives Lower of a substantial right guaranteed by the federal constitution, and thus raises a federal question.

Lower has fought long and hard against being put into prison. He won his first appeal to the supreme court, because the man who signed the complaint had no legal authority to do so, but that charge was abandoned and embezlement charges pushed.

WARMER NOW IN NEBRASKA

STORM ABATES AND BETTER WEATHER HAS COME.

Railroads Digging Out of the Drifts and Running Trains With Greater Regularity Than on Sunday.

MARCH IN OTHER YEARS.
Low temperatures for March are shown below, taken from the weather bureau records by G. A. Loveland, meteorologist for Lincoln:

—11	March 6, 1883.
— 7	March 2, 1913.
— 6	March 4, 1891.
— 6	March 1, 1890.
— 5	March 14, 1897.
— 5	March 7, 1906.
— 4	March 16, 1900.
— 7	March 18, 1923.

It was warmer in Nebraska Monday forenoon, the temperature rising rapidly from zero and below to thawing by noon. The wind came from the south and the temperature began rising between 7 and 8 a. m. at Lincoln.

Low temperatures in Nebraska reported Monday morning were: Lincoln —3; North Platte, 2; Omaha —4; Valentine 0.

Railroad reports showed temperatures on the Burlington lines ranging from 3 below to 20 above, the higher temperatures in the early morning being in the west.

The Burlington was running trains on all lines, having cleared its branches during the night and early morning with snow plows. The Sioux City-O'Neill line was the last to be attacked but word reached Lincoln that it would be opened by 10 a. m. The Columbus line was opened in the early morning, but the Columbus-Lincoln train did not arrive here until after 1 p. m. No. 2 from the west was 40 minutes late, and No. 5 from the east 2 hours and 45 minutes late. No. 42 from the northwest was practically on time, indicating the cessation of the storm in that region much earlier than it ended here.

Most of the lines could be opened by wedge plows, Burlington officials reported. On the freight line between Cushman and Cobb Junction, just outside of Lincoln, however a rotary was necessary where a twelve foot drifts had formed in the big cut. That line was opened and is now in service.

When the storm began the Burlington had three train loads of stock in transit on the Alliance division. This stock was kept in motion and delivered to the markets Monday morning. It was necessary to keep the trains moving to save the stock.

Rock Island trains from the east, due in Lincoln Sunday evening were more than twelve hours late, arriving during the morning Monday. No. 6 from the west was reported on time, showing that storm effects farther west were not serious. It was necessary to run snowplows over the road to clear the way for trains. It was said the Nelson branch would be opened during the day.

The Missouri Pacific had much trouble in the cuts near Eagle. There it had four engines and two snow plows stalled in the snow most of the morning. The line, however was cleared over that section about noon and train service was resumed. The drifts in the Eagle vicinity were said to be very deep and very dense, the snow having packed solidly.

The Union Pacific was expecting to open up its south Platte branches during the day. The snow plow reached Valparaiso from Central City during the forenoon and was due to plow thru to Valley and south to Lincoln ofter that. Union Pacific branches north of Columbus were opened in the morning and service started. Main line trains from the each were running late because of the severity of the storm in Iowa, which held up traffic.

A Northwestern train spent twenty hours in the snowdrifts at Dale station, fourteen miles east of Fremont on the Omaha line Sunday. Monday reports however indjcated the main line tracks cleared on the Northwestern with trains running. The Lincoln line of the road, however, was not cleared so easily. A snow plow started out of Fremont Monday morning and made fair progress on its way to Lincoln until it struck the drifts near Swedeburg. There it go stuck in the snow and it was necessary to dig it out.

The snow plow reached Lincoln from Fremont at 1:20 p. m. and a passenger train from Fremont followed it in. A train for Fremont left immediately after. Other trains went out on time. The Hastings line may not be opened until Tuesday. Aside from these all lines of the Northwestern are reported open.

REPUBLICANS PLAN FUND FOR HARDING

To Start "Educational Drive" To Inform Voters of Benefits of His Term.

PRELIMINARY TO 1924 CAMPAIGN

Hull Expresses Doubt of a Re-Nomination.

SAYS DAUGHERTY FRIGHTENED

Early Move in Presidential Campaign Declared by Democratic Chairman Due to Dissatisfaction in Ranks.

PALM BEACH, Fla., March 19.—With Harding's 1924 campaign formally under way, a conference of party leaders will be held soon in Washington or Chicago to discuss means of raising money for an intensive "educational drive." The purpose will be to inform the voters, thru all possible mediums, of the benefits to be derived from continuing the president in office for another four years and maintaining republican control of congress. This drive will be preliminary to the 1924 campaign.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—Doubt concerning President Harding's ability to secure renomination in 1924 prompted Attorney General Daugherty to make an early start in the campaign to renominate and reelect Mr. Harding, Cordell Hull, chairman of the democratic national committee, declared in a formal statement today.

Hull declared conservative as well as progressive republicans long ago realized that Mr. Harding could not be re-elected and began to look for another candidate.

Harding supporters who Hull said were largely "the office holding and office seeking classes," realized something had to be done to revive interest in the president if he was to be renominated.

"In order to "suppress party leaders who are rapidly deserting the Harding cause," Daugherty announced the president's candidacy and arranged for a speech-making tour of the west in the hope of lining it up with eastern supporters, Hull said.

Hull made a sharp attack on the president, characterizing his administration as the most conspicuous failure in American history.

TROLLEY SERVICE BETTER

O. J. Shaw Said Last Snow Not So Troublesome to Service as That of Last Week.

According to General Manager O. J. Shaw of the Lincoln Traction company street car service was almost normal by noon Monday. He said the last snow was not so troublesome to the service as the one just preceding it, as it was a dryer snow, and Sunday morning at the end of the storm, the autos did not pack the snow into the tracks so badly as they did the one that fell previously.

The two snows, however, gave the company more trouble than it has had at any time in the last ten years, he said. All of Sunday night the company had crews of men clearing tracks. The last snow could be swept off, but the first fall had to be removed with picks and shovels.

The Bethany cars were running at noon. The service on that line was held up a time because car 700 broke an axle at Twenty-seventh and Vine streets. College View cars ran all of Sunday evening. North Sixteenth street was blocked Monday morning, but was to open before night. North Tenth street, Lancaster and State hospital lines were operating. The rest of the lines, Mr. Shaw said, were working almost normally, except that perhaps the schedules were not quite regular.

The interurban was in operation all day.

Members of the Lincoln Ad club heard all about the Western Newspaper nUion and how it aids the small publisher in getting out his paper, when Miss Mette Hansen, a member of the club, spoke at the semi-monthly luncheon Monday at the chamber of commerce. Miss Hansen described not only the ready print service familiar to the public, but told of the national advertising and mat and cut service and other ways in which the business takes care of its customers. The topic inspired numerous questions at the close of Miss Hansen's talk.

This was the second in a series of programs to be provided by club members. The third has not yet been announced. There will be ten altogether, taking the club into the vacation season.

EXTRA MONEY FOR BARROWS

IN ACCORDANCE WITH LAW OF LEGISLATURE.

Obtains State Warrants for $1,801 for Time When Governor McKelvie Was Outside of Bounds.

P. A. Barrows, formerly lieutenant governor, hurried from the state house Monday morning, cutting corners short at the west exit of the grounds and made straight for the nearest bank. Mr. Barorws had with him a state warrant for $1,801.69. It was a warrant made out payable to him. It had been issued by tSate Auditor Marsh and properly countersigned by State Treasurer Robinson. Mr. Barrows saw to it that the warrant was issued and countersigned. He was at the state house Monday morning for that very purpose before any state officer reached the capitol. Mr. Barrows waited patiently about until the proper officers did appear. He lost no time in cashing it after he got the warrant. No one sought to interfere with him. It was a wararnt issued pursuant to an act of the legislature which Governor Bryan allowed to become a law without his signature of approval. The bill passed by the legislature is in payment of time which Mr. Barrows says he served as acting governor during the four years Governor McKelvie was in office, minus Sundays and days when the lientenant governor was presiding over the state senate and receiving pay fo rthat work, tho at the same time acting governor.

The legislature took his word for the number of days he says he was acting governor tho on some of those days it is alleged the acting governor performed no service and at the time did not know he was acting governor. He had an opinion from Attorney General Davis to the effect that he was entitled to act as governor whenever the real governor was on the wrong side of the state line, but that the acting governor ought to be discreet about taking over the reoins of government in such cases.

Governor McKelvie had paid Mr. Barrows $100 and then ceased There is no statute authorizing the acting governor to receive pay for time served when the governor is temporarily out of the state. The absence of such a law or a final court decision will leave matter in doubt in the future. Mr. Barrows was held by the district court not to be entitled to pay. He did not appeal, but had a bill introduced in the legislature to pay his claim.

A bill which will settle the question for future cases is pending in the senate but its passage is said to have been opposed and it has not been reported out of the judiciary committee. Many legislators are opposed to paying the lieutenant governor for every day the real governor is out of the state, and such a bill is likely to meet with opposition for future cases. The Barrows case is settled by a special act of the legislature, but the same legislators who passed it may not approve it as a precedent for future acting governors.

STORM GRIPS MIDDLE WEST

BLIZZARD EXTENDED FROM THE ROCKIES TO ATLANTIC COAST.

Crop Damage Will Run Into Millions—Declared to Be the Worst Storm in Twenty-five Years in Many Places.

CHICAGO, March 19.—The entire country from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic coast was in the grip of a terrific blizzard today.

Four persons were killed in Colorado as a result of the storm.

Crop damage to the Kansas potato crop and the Oklahoma peach crop will run into millions.

Wire communication was paralyzed in many sections. Telephone and telegraph companies reported miles of poles down.

Passenger service on the railroads was curtailed. Freight embargoes were placed in effect in several sections.

Sub-zero temperatures were reported thruout the entire west.

Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Wisconsin and Iowa advices declared the storm was the most severe in twenty-five years.

The gale was accompanied by a heavy fall of snow, swept into mountainous drifts by the wind.

Two passenger trains on the Chicago & Northwestern were reported stalled in the drifts near Boone and Ames, Ia.

Three children of Allen Evans were found frozen to death in a shanty near Baxter, Col. Thomas Reed, merchant, died from exposure near Kutch, Col., when his truck was stalled in the drifting snow.

The storm swept out of the northwest, causing temperatures to drop from 20 to 50 degrees in a few hours.

All railroads running into Chicago from the west reported service subject to long delays. Trains leaving Chicago for the west were pulled by two engines.

The crack flyers from Chicago east were out in half to prevent delays.

No trains have been operated over the Harbor Springs, Mich., branch of the Pennsylvania railroad in nearly a week. Teams carried the mail over Little Traverse bay to Petoskey, Mich.

Milwaukee traffic was snow bound by ten to twelve foot drifts.

Lowest temperatures of the winter were reported from many Missouri points.

The weather bureau predicted freezing weather in the southeast and Atlantic coast states today. The worst of the storm will pass within forty-eight hours, forecasters declared, and will be followed by abnormally high temperatures.

MAN PREYED UPON WOMEN

Slayer of Dorothy King Believed to Be Member of Underworld Who Drugged and Robbed Them.

NEW YORK, March 19.—A member of the Philadelphia and New York underworld who preyed upon women—drugged them and robbed them of their jewels—was hunted by police seeking the slayer of Dorothy King, "white light butterfly" today.

Acting District Attorney Pecora declared that the same man is wanted in connection with other similar crimes, including a theft of $30,000 worth of gems from a New York woman.

As the search for this suspect started, witnesses questioned by Pecora and Inspector Coughlin of police, made statements that deepened the mystery of the killing.

John Thomas, elevator boy at Miss King's apartment house, denied the story of the mysterious "Mr. Marshall," millionaire, that the wealthy suitor of the girl went down the elevator upon leaving the apartment the night before she was found dead.

Thomas said he took "Marshall" to the apartment but the latter did not return via his elevator. "Marshall" told Pecora that he left by the elevator and that Miss King was in good spirits at the time. Following "Marshall's appearance at the district attorney's office, Pecora exonerated him from suspicion and described the millionaire a a "married, tired business man who was taking a flyer in romance."

"Marshall," Pecora said, admitted he had visited the "butterfly" about ten times in a year and had given her about $10,000 worth of jewels.

The case was further entangled by police information that the slain girl, shortly before her death, visited the apartment of an admirer. The body of Miss King, also known as Keenan, was removed from her mother's apartment to a cemetery yesterday.

YORK'S WEDDING A WORRY!

MOSCOW (By mail)—The agricultural department has ended its seed campaign and is looking froward to the coming harvest with confidence that the crpo for 1923 will be so ample that Russia will be able to export largely and at the same time have ample surplus to prevent a recurrence of the famine, which has raged in sections for two winters. The department says that the total acreage sown for the coming harvest will amount to between 82 and 85 per cent of the 1916 acreage, or about 78 per cent of the acreage of 1913, the year before the world war.

The state of siege which was proclaimed in Coblenz has been extended now to Ehrenbreitstein.

FASCISTI MOVE IN BAVARIA

STARTED AS ANTI-JEW, ANTI-PRUSSIAN ORGANIZATION.

Beer Bottle Patriotism Is Involved With Many of Ehrhardt's Old Brigade Included.

BERLIN.—(By Mail.)—Germany's fascisti, the "national socialists" of Bavaria under Adolf Hittler, is based on anti-Semitism and anti-Prussianism.

It carries the banner of "national unity," plus "right and order," and seeks to achieve "order"—that is, ultra-reactionary order—with some of the old monarchists in the saddle, thru disorder and force.

Its designating mark is the "Hakenkreuz," or swastika cross, the symbol of the anti-Semitic movement.

The supporters of Hittler are for the most part youngsters. They swank about in a uniform of olive gray with a sort of miner's cap, a red arm band with the white Hakenkreuz thereon.

There is a lot of beer-bottle patriotism involved in the movement. Many of the terrific iron division—Ehrhardt's old brigade—are involved in it, and are distinguished by the marker on the sleeve, bearing a sailing ship.

Ludendorff Involved.

Hittler, the leader, is a man who came into prominence only in the past year. The general belief about the German "fascisti" is that they talk big, and will act little. They are, it is true, building up a rather big organization, but the chances are that they will continue to shoot off their mouths without affecting any serious damage other than to make great inroads on the Muenchener beer supply the while. Ludendorff is deeply interested in the movement. Living in seclusion in a wonderful villa at the edge of pretty Munich, he has his lines out and his fingers on the pulse of Bavaria all the time. He is friendly with Hittler.

Few Arms.

As a matter of fact, the number of arms in Bavaria is comparatively negligible. What gives the Bavarian movement a background is the fact that Bavaria and Prussia have long been at odds. Bavaria thinks Prussia is the scum of the earth. The radicals of Berlin are blamed by the fascisti for all of Germany's woes. One had only to damn Berlin to get three rousing cheers.

Bavaria would like its own little king show; and would even be willing to cut loose from Berlin.

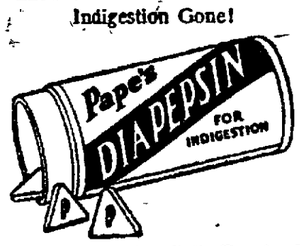

All this ferment makes for a good planting ground for the propaganda for the ceremonials of the Hittler fascisti.

But the movement looks to most neutral observers to be one with a lot of "hokum" to it—lots of froth and beer-keg patriotism.

Just now the Bavarian and central governments are doing their best to discredit the whole show by labeling it with the brand of "French gold."

HOLDS SERVICE OF SUN GODS

Dr. William Guthrie Attempts to Show Ancient Religions Prepared for and Founded Christianity.

NEW YORK, March 19.—In an effort to show that ancient religious prepared for and founded Christianity, Dr. William Norman Guthrie last night held a service to Amen-Ra and Aten, sun gods of ancient Egypt, in the church of St. Marks on the Bouwerie.

As huge lanterns threw colored lights—green and blue, red and amber—over the kneeling congregation, Dr. Guthrie chanted the age old prayer of adoration:

"Hail to thee, Amen-Ra, lord of the thrones of the earth, ancient of days, lord of the ages, upstayer of things that are, foremost of the gods, lord of truth and righteousness, benetter of the gods, maker of men and beasts and herbs."

RADIO RAISES NEW QUESTION

LEBANON MAN CAUSES HEAD SCRATCHING AT CAPITOL.

Complains That Telephone Company Has an Apparatus That Prevents Him From Getting Proper Radio Service.

A bran new question was plumped Monday at the state railway commission, and led to some agitation of gray matter. It is what rights have a radio receiver that a telephone company is bound to respect. John R. Polly lives at Lebanon, where he operates one of two radio sets. The Beaver Valley Telephone company has a plant at that place, about three blocks from where his radio lifts its rods into the air.

This telephone company has what is known as a pole ringer. It is operated by a hand crank, and when it is going good it creates an electric current that permeates the circumambient and produces what Mr. Polly says is a popping sound in his radio. The result is that he gets nothing. He says that radio receivers at his town and at Danbury where market reports are coming in complain of this interference.

Mr. Polly says he has spoken to the company about it, but it has done nothing. He would like to invoke the powers of the railway commission. He will be informed, however, that so far the legislature has not given it jurisdiction over radio service. It does have it of telephone service, but it is not of the latter that Mr. Polly complains. It would be as tho a hospital might complain because of annoyance to patients by the noisy operation of a telephone wire near at hand. The courts are the only relief.

A formal complaint has been filed with the commission by the Farmers' Shipping association of Abdal, Nuckolls county, eight miles northwest of Superior, on the Prosser-Concordia branch of the Missouri Pacific, asking for an order for better stockyards facilities and better schedule of trains. A great deal of stock is shipped there, but the train runs early in the morning, making the shippers drive in the night before, and besides there are no proper facilities for preventing shrinkage while awaiting cars.

Not Mere Literature.

"I want to get some money for these love letters," said the fair visitor. "They're the scorching kind, too."

"In a breach of promise suit?" asked the young lawyer.

"Certainly. Did you think I mistook you for a publisher?"—Chicago News.

Paderewski to Appear in Omaha Tuesday Night.

Paderewski, the world's greatest pianist, will appear in concert in Omaha Tuesday night, March 20. This will be his only appearance in the state and is one of the only stops on his transcontinental tour, which is taking him from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast and return. Paderewski's sensational return to the concert stage this season has been one of the outstanding events of the past few years. Never in his long and brilliant career has he drawn such crowds and at no time in the past has he played with such fire, such abandon and such superb emotional and technical sweep.

The program which Paderewski will play in Omaha Tuesday night, March 20 is printed herewith; it will be noted that he has selected one of his most characteristic programs, including as it does Beethoven's Appassionata Sonata. Mendelssohn's Variations Serisuses. Op. 54, and other significant works which have long been identified with his public career. The program in full follows:

Variations Serieuses op 54. Mendelssohn.
Fantasia op 17, Schumann.
Sonata op 57 (Appassionata). Beethoven.
Nocturne, op 37 No. 2, Chopin.
Mazurka b flat minor, op 24, No. 4. Chopin.
Valse op 42. Chopin.
Scherzo C sharp minor. Chopin.
Au bord d' une source. Liszt.
Etude de concert F minor. Liszt.
Hungarian Rhapsody. Liszt.

And of course the encores with which Paderewski is ever wont to delight his audiences. Seldom is there heard a piano program of such proportions as the one the great Pole has selected for his Omaha appearance.

YOUR - - - PROBLEMS

By Mary Gordon

Dear Mary Gordon: Your advice concerning whether or not I should play open and above board with Theodore was good, but how shall I go about it to warn him of my competition? Shall I invite him to a duel, or shall I say "Look here, Kid, I'm about to cop off your girl!"?

Anyway, that young he-flapper reached town and Hope's apartment about simultaneously the other evening, and I happened to be calling on Hope at the same time. He came, ushered in with a blare of trumpets—auto horns, I mean.

O Theodore! O ukulele playing scion of wealth and splendor! Thy pompadour makes a French plate mirror look like the mug of a Zulu with the smallpox. Thy face—a history of expensive massages and mud baths! Thy outrageous self-assurance—thy toreador breeches, crepe de chine shirts, diamond ring and perfect teeth!

Innocent milk-and-water victim of tea parties and lace trimmed, silken covered pillows. Silk pyjamas and breakfast-in-bed sessions of uselessness!

Theodore isn't bad, yet he's not at all good. His badness doesn't consist of what he does for he doesn't do anything; it doesn't consist of what he doesn't do, for he isn't supposed to do anything, and wouldn't know how to do anything if he had to. He is a handsome cipher entirely surrounded with money. No faults and no virtues.

In spite of all his dad's money, I'm going to knock him for a row of powder-puffs, figuratively speaking. As Bacon would say, I'll knock him into a cocked flower basket. I'll be gentle. I'll say it with flowers, soap bubbles, toy balloons, perfume atomizers and shafts of moonlight. A battle of that sort of stuff against the strains of Theodore's ukulele.

Anyway, I had the pleasure of meeting him. He doesn't appear to like me. As soon as he came I volunteered to leave, but was urged to stay. In effect I refused, and asked Theodore to come to see me.

Now Mary Gordon, you have the scenery and characters before you. Please give me the part I must say—and set it to music, for above all things I must be tender and gentle to Theodore, and can't afford to do anything that would offend Miss Hope, or arouse her sympathy for the little fellow.—Lincoln.

A. You need no advice of mine, Lincoln, For I'm a potential pacifist. Go to it, my boy, and may the better man win!

Dear Mary Gordon: For two years I have been puzzled by a certain young man's actions towards me.

I met him one evening after school. He took my friend and me home.

For the past two years he has sent me a large box of candy for Christmas and this last valentines day I received a very cute little valentine.

He always seems tickled to see me and always speaks very nicely to me.

Sunday morning he took me for a little ride as he was waiting for his folks to get out of church and one night I invited him to a party and he came but those are the only times I have been with him except a few times when he took me home from town.

I think very much of this young man and would love to go with him. I don't know what to do about it. Mother says maybe he is afraid I will turn him down.

What would you advise me to do?—D. K. K.

Invite this young man to call on you at your home. This should start your friendship very nicely.

A True Friend: I'm sorry but I cannot use your letter. I cannot start a religious controversy here. Thank you for writing us, anyway.

Dear Mary Gordon: Having read your advice to "Unhappy" who desires an education, I decided to write you. I want to know if it is possible for a girl to work her way thru the university. May I receive a personal deply to inquiries?—Anxious.

A. It's not only possible but it is being done all the time. All that is necessary seems to be determination and good health. Surely, I shall be glad to write you a personal letter.

Dear Mary Gordon: I, for one am for the modern girl. While you may find many who are against her, I think you will find more who are for her.

Just because a girl powders and paints is no sign she is bad. She has a warm heart and with the exception of a few girls you will find that the modern girl can work and cook just as well as the "old fashioned" girl.

I agree with "Jess" in everything he has said except that boys and girls of twelve and fourteen do not "step out" and kiss. You may find some that do this undignified thing but the majority do not.

"Lincoln" is right I think when he says that "all's fair in love and war." He might just as well "beat the man's time" on the sly as in the light. I have beat many girls' time and I have done it both ways.

I will stop now for fear you will have a bad impression of me for contradicting your word—Kitty.

A. You see from the letter heading the column that "Lincoln" is pursuing his own sweet way in the matter. However, I can't really disapprove because he is doing it openly.

Hope you're right about the kiddies of twelve and fourteen—the normal ones are not sentimental, I know.

Dear Mary Gordon: Now that I have things tangled in a terrible mess there is nothing more left for me to do but ask for your advice.

I am eighteen years old and had been going with a boy one year my senior. We loved each other with what I once thought was an everlasting love. But alas like all foolish girls I took too much rope. After promising him I'd be true and not date any other boys—I did—and the minute he found out he lost all faith in me. Dropped me entirely. Oh Mary I called him and sent him letters galore asking forgiveness. And that I'd never trifle on him again. But he would not listen to me. He said we would be just far friends that is on speaking terms and that was all.

In my sorrow and loneliness is where I went wrong. I sought wild company, tried to live a life of excitement and recklessness in order to forget. But it was of no use. It's only made things more disagreeable. So for the last few months I again have been trying to lead a quiet and dismal life. But I fear he has now formed such a terrible opinion of me that he will never forgive and come back to me.

He has another steady girl now.

Whatever shall I do? Would it be silly and forward for me to write or call him and ask him to come over to talk to me a few minutes and then try to explain. Yet I fear that would make it all the worse. Mary Gordon I must win him some way or I'll live a life of wretchedness.—Naughty Nice.

A. You've done about all you can in the matter, haven't you? Can't you resolve to forget him? It sounds harsh, I know, but really it is about the only thing you can do. Perhaps if you ignore his existence for a while, he will come back voluntarily. Men don't like to be sought after. They want to "apply the mailed fist or sprinkle the rose water" themselves.

There are other young men in the world, you will soon find. Lots of other girls and women have proved that forgetfulness is a mere matter of time, plus determination and new interests.

Use A Fork.

WOMEN TERRORIZED BY APE

Council Bluffs Chief of Police to Form Vigilance Committees to Catch Man or Beast.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., March 19.—Vigilance committees will be formed by Chief of Police J. C. Nicoll in an attempt to capture a man or a gigantic ape who has been terrorizing women here for the past week.

The thing, which walks hunched up like an ape, with arms swinging below the knees sneaks up on women at night from behind and "tackles" them like a football player, rolling them on the ground. When the victim starts screaming it hastily retreats.

About a dozen women have been attacked. None of them got a good look at the attacker's face.

Chief Nicoll issued a warning to women to keep off the streets at night unless accompanied by male escorts.

"We have been hampered in our search because the women refuse to talk about the attacks, fearing publicity," Nicoll said.

Outside of the shock from fright and slight bruises none of the women have been injured.

CATCH SLAYER OF A PRIVATE

FRENCH BELIEVE MAN ASSASSIN WHO SHOT IN DARK.

Should Suspect Be Convicted by Courtmartial He Will Be Immediately Executed—Three Other Germans Held.

DUESSELDORF, March 19.—The French today caught a German suspected of being the assassin of Private Schmidt, sentry of the army of occupation shot in the dark at the Essen station Saturday night.

If the suspect is convicted by courtmartial he will be executed immediately. Three other Germans captured near the station shortly after the shot that killed the sentry was fired, are held. A fourth, shot while running away, died of wounds.

The shooting of Private Schmidt aroused bitterest resentment on the part of the French troops at Essen and elsewhere in the Ruhr, but from all reports the outbreak of reprisals that might have been a logical sequence to the assassination did not occur.

French troops withdrawing from Obenhausen wrecked the railroad station. The ticket offices and waiting rooms were demolished with bayonets and hamemrs, the first instance of destruction of this nature reported since the occupation. The reason is not given.

COBBEY SPEAKS AT WESLEYAN

Says There Is a Place for Every Small School With Ideals.

President Charles E. Cobbey of Cotner addressed the students of Nebraska Wesleyan Monday morning. He said in brief:

"At present I feel that there is a place for every school that is established. I have just returned from large meetings at Indianapolis and Chicago, where much was said against large universities. The presidents of such institutions said they could not do justice by their students. Dean Kelley of Manhattan, Kas., said that he had 1100 more students than could be adequately cared for. Smaller schools stand for ideals. Without these ideals, the smaller schools have no right to exist. The college athletic question is becoming a formidable problem. At these large meetings there was much agitation concerning this. One president of a small college said that $13,000 had been paid for a coach last year. This was two times as much as the head of the school draws.

"I believe the solution of clean athletics is in the hands of the young people. Along with ideals comes the virtue of perseverance. That which makes for success is first the ideal or desire and next the everlasting perseverance. A man must be willing to pay the price if he would be a success."

Don't Spoil Your Child's Hair By Washing It

When you wash your child's hair be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water, and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.—Advertisement.

GRAIN DEALER SNOW BOUND

GEORGE ROBERTS AND FAMILY CAUGHT IN HUGE DRIFT.

Ten Policemen Battle More Than Three Hours to Rescue Quartet—Fifty Others Frost Bitten During Storm.

OMAHA, March 19.—George A. Roberts, millionaire grain dealer, his wife, their daughter, Elizabeth, and the family chauffeur had narrow escapes from freezing to death when their automobile stuck in a deep snow drift near their suburban home while the worst blizzard since 1888 raged early Sunday morning. They were rescued after ten policemen had battled for more than three hours.

Both Roberts' feet were frozen while Patrolmen Bozen, McDonald and Payne were badly frost bitten. Every member of the party suffered severely.

Dan Tata, sixteen, of Ralston, Neb., was lost in the blizzard and may have frozen to death, his parents fear. Young Tata started to walk from Ralston to South Omaha about 6 p. m. Saturday to go to a picture show. Nothing had been heard of him up to noon today.

Fifty other persons were frost bitten during the storm but no fatalities were reported.

The wind had died away today and the weather was clear and cold, with warm weather promised.

Railroad traffic in the vicinity has been demoralized during the past twenty-four hours. The Union Pacific is running about half of its trains. The Northwestern and Rock Island were forced to discontinue all trains for several hours. Rotary snow plows, working continually, are bringing order out of the chaos and regular service is expected this afternoon.

Omaha faced a milk and coal famine today. Many people have been unable to obtain milk or coal for five days. Several coal yards are snowbound and only small quantities could be delivered until the snow is cleared away.

A baby boy was born to Mrs. Helen Mueller, twenty-two, of Mountrose, S. D., a few minutes after she had asked for shelter from the storm at the home of Mrs. Lillian Smith. Her husband had deserted her, Mrs. Mueller said.

Fire of undetermined origin during the height of the storm destroyed the building occupied by the Dans Shoe and Clothing company, doing damage estimated at $200,000. In the face of a fifty mile wind, firemen succeeded in saving the Beddeo Clothing company next door and the Karbach block adjoining.

The temperature was 2 degrees below zero here this morning. The mercury was rising rapidly.

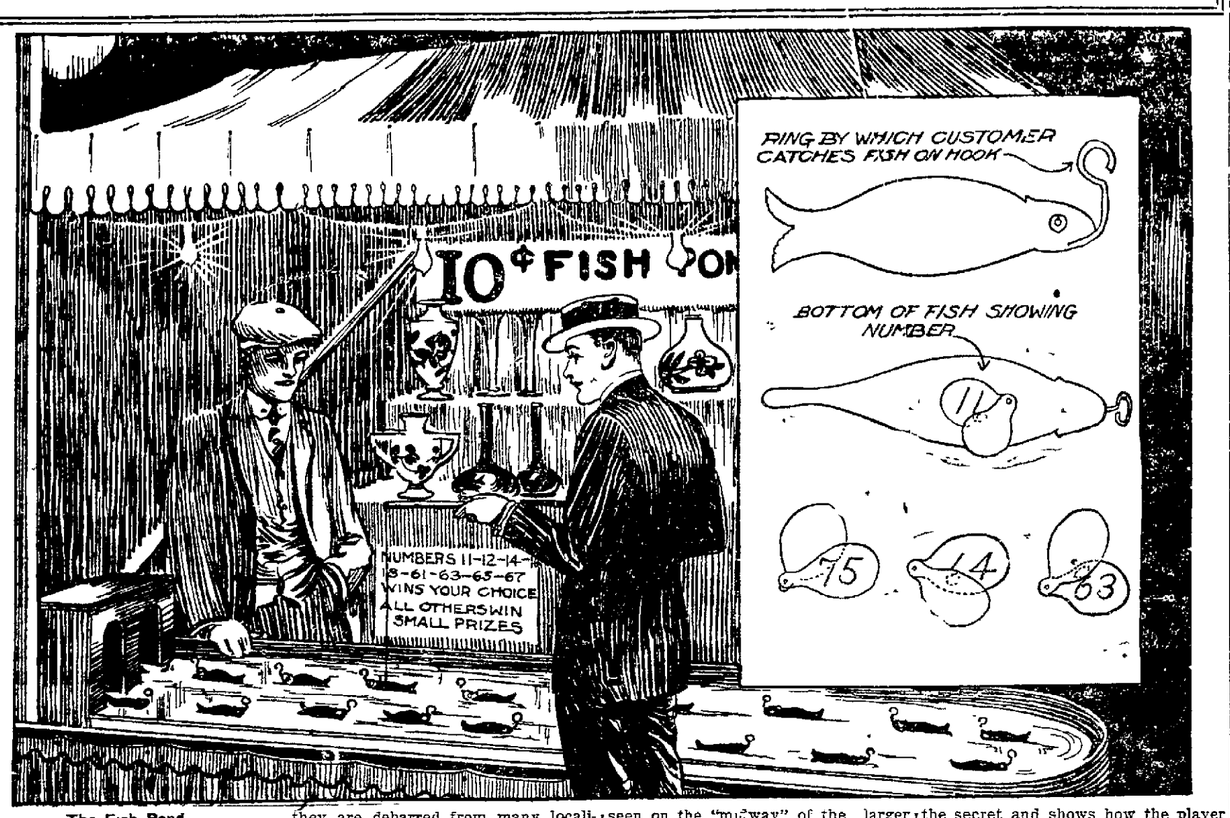

Unable to reach their home Saturday night because of the storm, Mr. and Mrs. C. Adams stopped at a southside hotel. They left a gas heater burning. Sunday morning they were found by a hotel clerk nearly asphyxiated. They were taken to a hospital where it is said they will recover.

The lowest temperature recorded during the storm was at O'Neill, where the thermometer reached 14 below. Loss of livestock is reported to have been light.

While police surrounded the Clairmont Inn in an effort to capture Otto Rose, sought in connection with a burglary, Rose, dressed in his pajamas, raised a third story window and leaped into a snow pile. He was caught half frozen after a chase of several blocks. He suffered a fractured foot.

BY WALTER B. GIBSON

The Fish Pond.

Every one who has visited a circus or a county fair (and who has not?) is more or less familiar with the cry of the gamester who sits in his little tent and invites all comers to step up and "try your luck."

"Right this way, folks," he calls, "and win a silk shirt for a dime. Ten cents gives you a big kewpie doll. Who's next?"

Perhaps the reader has "taken a chance" at one of these games, and perhaps he has won a "big prize"—perhaps if he did win a prize, it was, in all probability, due to the fact that something about him won the gamester's heart. For many of those simple games are entirely controlled by the operator who stands behind the counter and the person who "plays the game" becomes his helpless victim.

The game of the carnivals, circuses and fairs are known as "concessions," and are divided into two classes: games of chance and games of science and skill. The games of chance are, for the most part, legitimate, but they are debarred from many localities as being gambling devices. This leaves the field clear for games of "science and skill." A number of these games are fair enough. But too many of the operators are over-anxious to make big profits and quick returns, so they deliberately employ secret devices and unfair methods by which the player's chances are lessened, and in many instances entirely eliminated.

Such concessions are known as "joints," and the secret device by which unfair results are obtained is called a "gaff." The existence of such "joints" has been deplored by the better class of circus and carnival men, and a nation-wide campaign has been instituted to eliminate the undesirable concessions, as they have been largely responsible for the ill repute which has fallen upon various carnivals and circuses.

The game of "Fish Pond" is one of the prettiest and most interesting of all carnival concessions. It is an elaborate affair that requires a considerable outlay of money on the part of the operator and hence it is usually seen on the "midway" of the larger fairs.

The large drawing shows the game in operation. A stream of water, flowing down a narrow channel, carries along with it a hundred wooden fish. Attached to each is a bit of wire, terminating in a large loop. The player is provided with a fishing rod, a hook and line. He pays ten cents for the privilege of "hooking a fish."

When the player has drawn forth a fish, the operator takes it from the end of the player's line and, swinging back an overlapping piece of wood on the bottom of the fish, reveals a number. (See explanator diagram.) If the number corresponds with any of the ten winning numbers (see large drawing), the player wins a "big prize." The fish are numbered from one to 100.

But, strange to say, the player never succeeds in landing a big number. The operator, however, can always catch a fish of value when he takes the pole to show "how easy it is."

The explanatory diagram reveals the secret and shows how the player (as one operator has termed it) makes a "sucker" of himself. The numbers are not neatly stamped on the bottom of the fish, but are crudely scratched, or engraved. If the overlap is not completely swung aside, any ordinary number can be shown as a "winner." Thus the operator can always win but when his victim catches a fish, the overlap is completely swung aside, and an ordinary number is revealed.

The ten winning fish do not appear "in the swim." They are retained inside the opening at the left of the counter where the fish emerge, but can be released when desired, in case the game should be investigated by the authorities. After the fish traverse the length of the counter the channel continues back underneath the counter, and the fish are lifted up by machinery, to start their journey once again. Thus a perpetual stream of fish is continually floating by, to fill the demands of the perpetual stream of "suckers" who place their good money on the game, and the operator, not the customer, "hooks the poor fish."

HOUSE FINANCE COMMITTEE MAY SURPRISE GOVERNOR.

Chairman Mears Hints That Big Appropriation Bill May Put in Appearance Within a Week or Ten Days.

Chairman Grant Mears of the house finance committee has hinted that the big appropriation bill, introduced by the committee, may appear on the house floor within a week or ten days. The big items are being ironed out and most of the expending agencies have been heard.

While the chairman is more or less reluctant to indicate the contents of a bill yet in course of construction, rumors are common that the total amount will be considerably less than contained in Governor Bryan's budget—possibly upwards of a million dollars less.

The committee wiped out or rather declined to insert a little $10,000 item contained in Mr Bryan's burget for improvements, repairs, gas, water, telephone, lights and janitor service in connection with the mansion where he lives and the grounds surrounding it. The governor asked for more than any other governor has required and since this presumably is a time for the practice of economy, members of the finance committee assume that the governor may dispense with a few luxuries.

Whether or not the committee expects the governor to mow his own grass and perform janitor service is not disclosed. Committeemen, however, decline to concede that because a governor now receives $10,000 more for the biennium than old time governors received, mansion maintenance should increase accordingly. It is said that the mansion is in excellent repair and that the governor should live comfortably for two years without expenditure along this line.

Another small item which the committee declined to recognize, tho the governor presented it in his budget, is that of $23,500 for the printing of reports and the printing of the blue book. Members of the committee are inclined to look upon the blue book as a luxury at a time when tax reduction is the paramount issue.

The committee slashed $16,500 from the amount proposed by Governor Bryan for the military department. When the committee declined to send out the governor's appropriation bill, it was stated that the measure referred to activities or departments not in existence. The fact that the governor's figures were held to be a bit high may also have exerted some influence.

"CUPID'S WAY"

By Fay Stevenson

(Copyrigh, 1923, by New York World.)

An Unexpected Confidence.

So Dr. Kent had given her a limited time to make her decision!

Muriel could hardly realize what had happened.

During his last call he declared his intenuon of not coming to see her again until she decided between Landis and him.

And now even Landis was failing her.

Had she played fair with both of them? Could a girl safely keep two suitors and expect them both to be wildly infatuated with her?

Landis no longer slipped in unannounced evenings to see her. He frequently remained away three weeks at a time and sometimes she had to even phone him when she wanted him to spend an evening with her. She made a point of never phoning to his home but she had, on several occasions, called him up at the office or the vicarage.

It seemed very dull now that Dr. Kent no longer dropped in every evening before visiting his patients or came in tired out at nine, when his calls were nearly always over, to have a brief chat. Violets, roses and cut flowers came from him two or three times a week and frequently a five-pound box of chocolates, but not a note or a telephone message.

One evening, when she was about to call up Lulu Rogers, the phone rang and Landis announced he would like to call. At first she was going to put him off, but when he stated he had something he would like her advice about, she decided it was best to see him then and there.

"I suppose you thought I had told you all about my love affairs," he confided a little later, and there was a faint smile about his lips as he waited for her to encourage him to go on.

"Oh, let's see, there was the O'Brien girl, some little country flapper upstate, and there were quite a few Columbia girls, weren't there?" she laughed. "But don't tell me there are any more, Garry."

"There aren't as far as I'm concerned," he smiled. "But there is another girl."

"You mean that she cares for you and you don't care a cookie for her? How interesting."

"That's about it," he conceded. "We went to the same school and when I was still in knickerbockers she insisted on sending me postal cards and even left a book at my door one time. Of course, as a kid I detested her. Not long ago thru mutual friends I learned her address and just because I was curious to see what she grew up into I called her up and made a date to call upon her."

"And she was lovely and charming and all that you admire in femininity?"

"She was as ugly as ever. I never saw a girl change so little in so many years. She's still fat and dictatorial. She's the type of girl who tells you where to sit, orders you to do this and do that and, hang it all, on top of that she has a maternal air about her. I don't believe she realizes I'm out of knickerbockers and smoke a pipe!"

Muriel roared at the description.

"Well, why don't you forget her?"

"That's easy enough but a few days ago I received rather a cute letter from her and on the impulse of the moment I wrote her I would call again if she phoned me when to come. You bet she did, and now I'm dated up for another evening with her."

Then it came out that this girl—Fanny Simpson—lived opposite some first cousins of Muriel's and both Muriel and Landis looked upon her with new interest.

"You go and see little Fanny," laughed Muriel, "and I'll manage to be over at my cousin's that evening. Just wait and see what happens!"

Tomorrow—New Light.

SHOOTING EXPOSES TRIANGLE

Son of Joliet Millionaire Shot to Death by Steel Worker When Found With Wife.

JOLIET, Ill., March 19.—Investigation of the shooting of Cecil Hopkins, by police today, brought to light an alleged triangle involving the son of one of Joliet's wealthiest residents, the wife of a worker in the steel mills and her husband.

Hopkins was found in his father's real estate office probably fatally wounded with bullets in his chest and abdomen. Edward McCarthy, a night worker in the steel mills here, admitted the shooting, police said. McCarthy's wife, Helen, was found hysterical, in the office with the two men, when authorities arrived.

McCarthy told authorities he discovered young Hopkins with his wife alone in the office, in one of the largest buildings in Joliet at 11 p. m.

"For some time I had suspected the friendship between Hopkins and my wife," McCarthy said, according to authorities who questioned him.

"Instead of going to work as usual, I watched the restaurant where my wife is employed. She left about 10:30 p. m. I followed her to Hopkins' office. I saw the figures of my wife and Hopkins silhouetted thru the heavy glass door.

"I knocked on the door and the lights were snapped out. Then I broke thru the glass. Hopkins tried to get away but I shot him and held my wife until police arrived."

Mrs. McCarthy was held in jail as a witness. She refused to discuss the affair. No charges will be placed against McCarthy pending the outcome of Hopkins' wounds, which physicians stated may prove fatal.

His literary efforts have appeared frequently in the American magazine, the Outlook, the Independent, Leslie's Weekly and other publications. Among the books he has written are 'Soldiers' Silhouettes,' 'Star Dust from the Dreams,' 'Giant Hours with Poet Preachers' and 'Out-door Men and Minds.'"

EDWARDS NOT VICIOUS MAN

HIS POLICE REPORT SHOWS NO TALE OF THREE MURDERS.

Bureau of Identification of Leavenworth Indicates He Wounded a Man and Forged Some Papers in Virginia.

Dorley Edwards, alias Courtney Jett, being held in the county jail awaiting trial on a charge of larceny, may not be such a wicked character as his own declaration might have led others to believe. He claimed he had murdered two men and killed his brother-in-law in self-defense. He also stated that he had escaped from the penitentiary at Richmond, Va.

The bureau of criminal identification at Leavenworth, Kas. mailed a report to Chief of Police Johnstone indicating that Edwards was sentenced to the state reformatory of Kentucky September 10, 1919, for five years of rofrgery; that as Courtney Jett he was sentenced to serve one year in the state penitentiary of Virginia May 1, 1922, for "cutting and wounding." According to the records he served time in a Kentucky reform school.

Edwards stated Saturday that he was sentenced to serve in Richmond on a manslaughter charge arising out of the death of his brother-in-law, and that after he had served nine months he escaped last May. Edwards' story is full of discrepancies and he frequently mixes his dates. Sheriff Hensel said he has received no word form Richmond.

HERE'S ANOTHER BIRD STORY

Harley Parsons Rescues Luckless Wanderers in Storm.

The Harley Parsons Family, 2025 Eucild, discussed items in the morning Journal with some interest. There was a story about spring birds and their troubles in a snow storm. One lady had succeeded in coaxing a robin onto her back porch. When that was read there was a loud sign of mirth emanating from a crate of robins behind the Parsons kitchen range. There was a story about birds dying in the storm and that seemed probable. A neighbor of the Parsons family has been feeding the birds and the birds to show their appreciation have been eating on the feast spread every day. Cheers came from the robin cage, because the Parsons family has been doing the same thing. Discussion of the loss of bird life in the storm brought no sign from the happy birds.

"The robins entered our back porch during the storm," explained Mr. Parsons," and did not leave when I went out on the porch. I just closed the door, caught them, put them in a box and put the box behind the stove so the birds would thaw out. Their feathers were filled with snow and ice and they were very cold. They have thawed out now and are enjoying themselves. When it gets a little warmer we will put them out in the back yard again to enjoy life. We will continue to feed them daily."

HARDING OUT TO WIN WEST

BELIEVES IT NECESSARY FOR HIS REELECTION.

Will Make Transcontinental Tour This Summer Because He Does Not Wish to Campaign Following Renomination.

WASHINGTON, March 19—The "winning of the west" will be the first objective of President Harding's campaign to reelection, which has been definitely started by the executive's close political associate, Attorney General Daugherty.

The president and his political advisers are understood to have decided that to attain a republican victory in 1924 the great bulk of the states in the middle and far west must be carried. In his respect the president will use the same political strategy as was employed by his predecessor, Woodrow Wilson, who in 1916 nosed out Charles E. Hughes by winning the west.

Hopes to Draw West.

Hope of winning the west into line behind the republican standard is the principal reason for the president's transcontinental tour this summer. He does not wish to make an extensive campaign tour folowing his renomination in June, 1924 and therefore feels he must get the record of his administration before the west this year.

A study of the results of the congressional election last November has convinced the republican political chiefs that the party must be strong in the west if it is to succeed. Gov. Al Smith's big majority in New York state with democratic gains in such states as Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland, make it all the more necessary to make gains in the west, these political observers believe. Victory cannot be obtained by carrying the rock ribbed republican states of Pennsylvania, Illinois and New England, they declare.

In most of the eastern states where prohibition is still an issue the republicans are "drier" than the democrats, and this according to some of g. o. p. leaders will jeopardize their strength there, altho it may react favorably westward.

In the last election the west also manifested some strange political upheavals which are indicative of its independence, but republican leaders believe the president, by his personality and his speeches, can counteract these movements on his tour.

Never West of Missouri.

The president never has been west of the Missouri river and he is very anxious to obtain the real viewpoint of this great region, in order to make some important recommendations for the party's 1924 platform.

Already invitations from scores of chautauquas, county and state fairs and other gatherings are pouring into the white house from the west.

It is now believed that the president may make as many as forty addresses on the tour, in addition to many short talks from the rear platform of his special train. His expected trip to Alaska after a strenuous west bound speaking tour will give him opportunity to rest up before a similar one eastbound.

HITS MAN WITH AX AND IS NOT SORRY

Miss Helen Bond was photographed in the jail at Toms River, N. J., where she is awaiting trial for severely wounding John Richardson, twenty-two, with an ax. Miss Bond alleged that Richardson was forcing his attentions on little Ruth Davis, a fourteen-year-old girl she knew, and that she would protect childhood at the risk of her own life.

The wedding being a full state affair, the men must wear uniform, and while the last word naturally lies with the king, the navy, army and air force are pleading that their own particular uniforms should be worn by the bridegroom.

Leipzig Nerve Specialists Summoned by Soviet to Moscow to See the Premier Who Has Been Ill.

BERLIN, March 19.—Reports that Premier Nikolai Lenin, suffering from partial paralysis, has sustained a critical nervous breakdown were abundant here today following departure of Professor Strumpell and Drs. Bumke and Nonne, famous Leipzig nerve specialists, for Moscow. The physicians received urgent summons from the Russian government.

One report from Riga, which was unconfirmed, declared Lenin had died, and that the news was suppressed.

The fact that a Swedish brain specialist was reported to have received summons to Moscow lent weight to the rumors concerning the Russian premier's mental condition.

LONDON, March 19.—The Russian trade delegation here, in close touch with the Moscow government, failed to receive Sunday the customary bulletin regarding Premier Lenin's condition.

The delegation, however, discredits reports from Helsingfors that Lenin is worse or dead.

HELSINGFORS, March 19.—The Russian war council was summoned today to consider important questions in connection with Premier Lenin's illness, according to dispatches from Moscow.

In '59—

Long before Nebraska had been admitted to statehood; when "Nebraska Territory" boasted of fewer than 30,000 white inhabitants; before any railroad touched its borders; and when Indians were still in possession of most of the land, Robert W. Furnas—pioneer Nebraska statesman, soldier, author and publisher—founded The Nebraska Farmer at Brownville, on the Missouri River.

That was in 1859. St. Louis was the nearest "big city." Printing presses, paper and ink were brought from there by steamboat. The finished copies were delivered by pony express and stage coach.

In the sixty-three years that have passed, Nebraska has grown from a sparsely settled unbroken prairie into a state of agricultural wealth and prosperity. And The Nebraska Farmer has grown from a 16-page monthly into a weekly publication, whose contents annually equal, in volume, the contents of 34 average books! Through good years and bad, in its own way, without fear and without bombast, it has helped to make farming a little more profitable, to make the farmer's work a little easier, to make farm homes a little happier.

As in 1859, a dollar still pays for a year's subscription. It was a good investment then. It's a better investment now. If you are interested in the agricultural affairs of the state (and what citizen isn't?) we'll gladly send you a sample copy upon receipt of a postal-card request.

Railway Commissioner Browne left Monday for Kansas City, where he will represent the commission in the hearing before the interstate commerce commission on the minimum weight for hogs. The railroads now fix this at 17,000 pounds, and the shippers say that this makes them load more hogs than can be carried without danger of some being smothered in order to make that weight. If they load only what they say is a proper number of hogs they have to pay for 17,000 pounds, in spite of the fact that they do not weigh that much. The railroads deny the claim of damage, and insist 17,000 is a proper minimum. Commissioner Taylor left Monday for Omaha to appear before the interstate commerce commission representatives who are investigating express rates and service.

MORE TIME FOR COMMITTEE

University Probers Get Another Week in Which to Present Their Final Summary.

When the house met Monday afternoon the committee in charge of investigating the affairs of the state university asked for and was unanimously granted leave to postpone submitting their complete report until Tuesday of next week, the 27th.

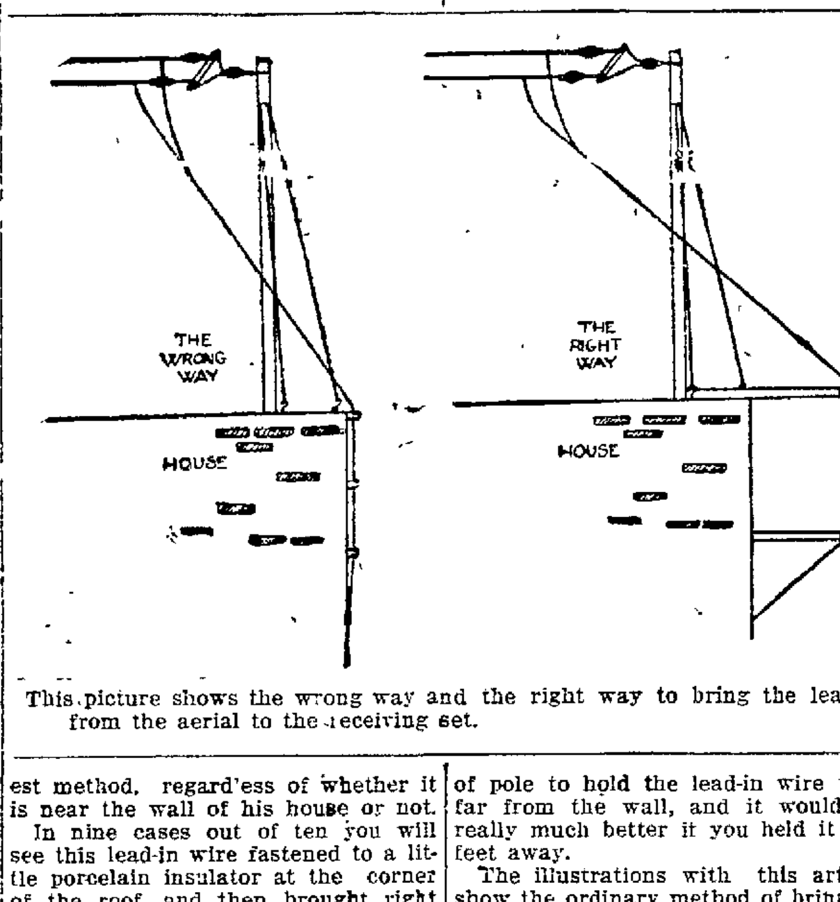

The committee has had some difficulty in systematically carrying on its probe by reason of sickness of members or in members' families or of university officials, and this had delayed getting evidence and making summaries.

An open hearing is to be held in the house Monday evening, beginning at 7:30 on H. R. 5 and H. R. 14, which are rural credit amendments to the state constitution which create a commission to handle funds for loans to farmers, such as in South Dakota, where the state credit is put behind bonds issued on the security of mortgages taken.

RADIO IN THE HOME

BY HENRY M. NEELY.

Problems of the Aerial.

This picture shows the wrong way and the right way to bring the lead-in from the aerial to the receiving set.

No. IX—Keep Your Lead-in Away From the Wall.

Judging from most aerial installations that you see in your travels around a city, the average amateur seems to think that once he has installed his aerial according to the best practice, so far as the antenna itself is concerned, he can bring his lead-in down to the first-floor window by the shortest and quickest and easiest method, regard'ess of whether it is near the wall of his house or not.

In nine cases out of ten you will see this lead-in wire fastened to a little porcelain insulator at the corner of the roof, and then brought right down the side of the house with a small insulator every here and there, holding the wire not more than an inch or two inches away from the wall.

He seems to think that so long as he uses insulated wire in this part of his outfit he is protecting himself against loss of the current. This, in a way, is all right, and would be perfectly satisfactory if he were dealing with direct current or with current which alternates as slowly as the house lighting current does.

But, when we are dealing with radio we are dealing with currents which alternate over 800,000 times a second, and when a current is moving back and forth at this tremendously high speed, it does a great many things that ordinary currents would never think of doing.

One of these things, and the most annoying is the tendency that such a current has to leak out of the wire, even thru insulation and be absorbed by any nearby object. This is really not a tendency to leak; it is, on the contrary, a constant tendency of nearby objects to absorb a great deal of the magnetic effect of the current and steal it away from the current that is in the wire.

It cannot be too strongly started that the farther away from the wall of your house you keep your lead-in the better results you will get: This does not mean that you must go to extremes and have a 50-foot pole sticking out of each window, but you certainly, should have at least five feet of pole to hold the lead-in wire that far from the wall, and it would be really much better if you held it ten feet away.

The illustrations with this article show the ordinary method of bringing the lead-in, down within an inch or two of the house, and also show the correct method of doing it. Few people realize what a difference there is in received signals between ths two methods of installation. Changing from the wrong method to the right one will, in nine cases out of ten, give you increased signals, that will be equal to a stage of amplification in your receiving set.

Right here it is well to say a word about the many people who seem to be bringing their lead-in down thru the cellar and on up to the room in which they have their apparatus installed. This makes the lead-in wire a great deal longer than is absolutely necessary and it is very bad practice. It is a safe rule to go upon that the straighter and shorter you get your lead-in from your aerial to your set the better will be the reception of signals. You must remember that the current which your aerial gathers is an extremely weak one and every extra foot of wire adds resistance which will decrease its strength considerably.

COUNTY SAYS LOST CHANCE

PROPERTY OWNERS OUGHT TO HAVE OBJECTED TO BOARD.

Legal Representative Tells Supreme Court Pen-Asylum Paving Assessments Are Legal and Should Stand.

The Lancaster county board of commissioners filed a brief in supreme court Monday in opposition to the demand of Fred Funke and others who own property liable for contributions to the cost of the paving that connects the city with the state penitentiary and hospital for the insane.

The county insists that an action in mandamus is not the proper way to determine the points at issue, since the property owners did not appear and protest to the county board of equalization when their assessments were being made, and not having appealed therefore they passed up the adequate remedy at law that then existed.

This paving cost in the neighborhood of $300,000, to which the county contributed $10,000 a mile. The remainder of the cost was assessed against adjoining and adjacent property owners, in the proportions that the law fixes. They are trying to get an opportunity to show that the assessments are much greater than any possible special benefit they derived from the putting in of the paving.

The county admits that no assessment ought to be greater than the special benefits that accrue from the making of the improvement, but insists that when the property owners did not appear before the board of equalization and make an issue of this fact the courts must presume that the respective assessments were correct and represent the special benefits received.

A large part of the brief is devoted to debating the proposition of whether the county commissioners did or did not commit a fatal error when they failed to fix the proportion that the county was to pay of the total cost. The property owners say that proportion means percentage, while the county insists that as $10,000 is the maximum which the county may contribute the board could do more than set out that amount as its proportion, since in advance of a knowledge of the cost it could not give in terms of percentages.

The action is brought in the form of a mandamus to compel the board to meet again and reassess the costs against the various property owners on the basis of benefits actually received.

SPECIAL CHURCH SERVICES.

Special church services will be held at the First Presbyterian church every evening during passion week at 7:45. Dr. Benjamin M. Nyce will speak at each service and Mrs. F. O. Schlegel will be in charge of the music. The first of the series of services will be held Monday evening, March 26.

DAMAGE SUITS TAKE TIME OF THE COURT

Half Dozen of Appeals From Jury Verdicts Are Submitted in Supreme Court at the Opening Session.

The supreme court resumed its sittings Monday with three dozen cases docketed for hearing. One of those submitted was a case where Receiver Fike of the bank at Valparaiso of which Ray A. Lower was former cashier was seeking to subject property claimed by Mrs. Lower to the satisfaction of claims against her husband.

Because Nichola Francesco was not compelled to show both his legs in a lawsuit he had against the Milwaukee railroad, the latter is asking the supreme court for a reversal of the $1,000 judgment he secured. Nichola was working on the section at Weston, Ia., when the foreman tossed a tie out of a boxcar which tie bounded and hit Nichola on the right leg. He spent several weeks in the hospital and claims permanent injuries. The company says that if the jury had been allowed to see the other leg it would have discovered that it, altho not hit by a tie, was in just as bad condition, thus showing that it was a general trouble and not the tie that bound. His attorney said the other leg really had been broken by a fall on the ice two years before, and that it was not an issue in the case.

The appeal of H. F. Swenson and the Rosenblatt Coal company from a $6,000 judgment in Douglas county in favor of Charles A. Forslund was argued and submitted. The cause of action is unusual. Swenson had ordered some coal of the Rosenblatt company, which was delivered, but as the bins were not completed a part of it was left in the street. After dark Forslund drove along in his auto, into the pile and in the upset that followed was so badly hurt that the jury gave him $6,000 damages. No light was put on the pile, altho the coal wagon driver said he gave one to Mrs. Swenson.

The appeal of the Central Taxicab company from a $5,000 judgment in favor of Charles Miller of Omaha was also submitted. Miller said he saw a taxicab driving in his direction at forty miles an hour and zigzagging. He tried to get out of the way, but it ran into him. The jury gave him $9,250, but the court cut it to $5,000. The company insists he was not nearly so badly hurt as he claimed.

LAW MAKERS ARE INVITED

INVESTIGATORS ASKED TO SIT WITH CAPITOL BOARD.

Ex-Governor McKelvie and W. H. Thompson to Be Present Wednesday When Old Commission Resumes Hearing.

Governor Bryan conferred with W. E. Hardy Monday and announced that the capitol commission would invite the legislative investigating committee to sit with the commission Wednesday to hear what the members of the commissioner and Ex-Governor McKelvie, a former member, have to say in regard to facts in dispute of an investigation which the commission is making. W. E. Thompson, the absent commissioner, has been called upon to attend this meeting. He left Passadena, Calif., last Saturday. If he is not delayed by the recent snow storm he is expected to arrive in Lincoln Tuesday and be ready for the commission investigation Wednesday. Walter W. Head of Omaha, Mr. Hardy, Mr. Thompson and George E. Johnson, secretary of the department of public works and Governor Bryan now constitute the capitol commission.

An investigation started by the commission was barely well under way when both houses of the legislature appointed a separate investigating committee on capitol matters. This latter investigation is said to have been one of the expressed desires of Mr. Johnson.

The senate investigators comprises Senator John Wiltse of Falls City, an attorney, Senator J. S. Kroh of Ogallala, a newspaper publisher, and E. R. Purcell of Broken Bow, also an editor and publisher.

The committee appointed by the speaker of the house comprises W. A. McCain of Stapleton, until recently county treasurer of Logan county; E. L. Kemper of Tecumseh, farmer; J. F. Kendoll of Ponca, retired taremr.

Senator Wiltse, chairman of the senate committee, said the joint committee expects to meet Monday evening to organize and outline the character of work they expect to take up. The resolution adopted in each house calls for a report from the committee before adjournment of the legislature. Mr. Wiltse said it favors the taking of testimony and investigation of whatever documentary evidence bears upon the methods of construction used by the capitol commission.

At the meeting of the capitol commission Wednesday the present and former members will be present. It has been stated that the old members are not agreed upon what took place in the commission meetings and at the awarding of contracts more than one year ago. The question of what bids were considered and what were not received and considered is in dispute. The contracts made with Architect Goodhue and with builders and stone quarry companies are also said to be in dispute. Until facts are agreed upon the commission will be unable to arrive at decisions in regard to charges filed by Mr. Johnson against Mr. Goodhue.

The commission believes the legislative investigating committee ought to be present when the commissioners give their version of contracts and bids entertained.

The commission has been meeting behind closed doors and giving out results of its inquiry from time to time. Shorthand records of all testimony taken at a former hearing are to be given to the public. The legislative joint committee will have the benefit of all the records and testimony adduced before the commission. Senator Wiltse favors open hearings by the legislative investigators.

LOOKING FOR BANKING BILL

Senate Sub-Committee Soon to File Its Amendments With the Main Committee on Banks.

The senate committee on banking is expected to receive a report Monday afternoon from a sub-committee with recommendations for amendments to H. R. 272, the banking bill passed by the house. The sub-committee comprises Anderson, Hastings, Smrha and Thielen. The other committeemen to whom this report will go are Bliss, chairman, Warner, Allen, Saunders Rickard and Reifenrath.

Several weeks ago notice was served that Governor Bryan would veto and possibly refer to the voters the provisions of the house bill unless certain changes were made. The governor is opposed to giving power to an advisory banking commission to be chosen by bankers and is opposed to the use of the guaranty fund for any purpose except the payment of depositors. The senate committee has been trying to amend the bill. Friends of the measure say no amendments will be adopted by the senate except such as are approved by its friends and that there are enough votes to carry the bill over the governor's veto and with an emergency clause. If it carries an emergency clause it is not subject to the referendum.

Whether the maximum annual special assessment is to be reduced and what power is to be given to the persons chosen by bankers to help enforce the law, how the guaranty fund is to be used and who shall appoint and control receivers of banks are some disputed questions.

ABOUT READY FOR SIFTERS

GRANT MEARS PREPARED WITH CREATIVE MOTION.

Proposes That Committee Consist of Seven Republicans, Five Democrats and Speaker as Chairman.

On Monday, fifty-third legislative day in the house, Grant Mears, chairman of the house finance committee, was prepared to submit a motion calling for the selection of a sifting committee to take cahrge of bills on general file, the committee on committees to report on selections not later than Wednesday at 10 a. m. Mr. Mears provides that the sifters shall consist of seven republicans and five democrats, with Speaker Mathers acting as chairman. It is customary to select two members from each congressional district and the usual policy will be followed.

Wednesday will be the fifty-fifth legislative day in the lower branch. Two years ago sifting committee appointments were confirmed on the fifty-first legislative day, March 10. Three members of the present session were among the sifters. Mr. Mears was one of two from the Third district. Representatives Barbour and Gould, both veteran members were the sifters of the Sixth.

With more than 100 bills cluttered on general file and with the oratorical battle relative to form of government still in progress, standing committees will grind out bills as per custom and the list probably will be much longer before disposal of the special order permits tackling of the file. The move by Mr. Mears may have a tendency to curtail oratory in connection with the two governmental plans now under consideration.

Figures prepared by Chief Clerk F. P. Corrick Monday indicate that there are 143 bills on general file. Eighteen house measures have received the governor's approval, 142 bills have passed the house and gone to the senate. The house has killed 243 bills and but 174 remain in the hands of the several standing committees. Fifty-six senate files have come to the house from the senate and an even dozen of them have passed the lower branch.

Mr. Mears made his motion at the Monday afternoon session, but it was discovered that the rules of the house provide that each congressional district shall select two members of the sifting committee and these must be elected by the house. His motion was changed to conform to the rules and introduced again later in the afternoon.

Floyd Reed Wins Wrestling Title at Columbus; Six Big Time Clubs Look Good

NEBRASKA WRESTLER BRINGS HOME MEDAL

Last Year's Captain Wins Western Title at 158 Pounds—Other Huskers Place in Respective Matches.

Floyd Reed, captain of last year's Nebraska wrestling team, brought home the onlygold medal, emblematical of a Western Intercollegiate wrestling title, from the annual meet at Columbus, O. He won in the first round over Hall of Ohio State and in the finals from Player of Illinois. It was Hall's first reverse of the season and Player had won seven out of eight starts in dual competition.

Probst, in the 115-pound class lost to Turner of Purdue and won third place when Dickerson of Ames failed to show up. Pfeffer of Iowa won this class. Probst beat him in the Iowa-Nebraska dual meet.

Renner took third place in the heavyweight division. He lost his first round match to Greer on a time decision of 2 minutes, 11 seconds and won over Sarpolius, Chicago university's wristlock artist.

Captain S. A. Troutman who won the 175-pound title placed third. He was eliminated in the first round by Templin of Wisconsin who gained a one-minute, three-second time decision. Troutman had little trouble winning over James of Iowa for third place.

There were four wrestlers in each class, chosen from the different teams of the conference by a committee which judged them on their season's records. The two winners of the first round wrestled the finals and the losers went on for third place.

Sargent, representing Nebraska in the fencing division of the meet, took first place by placing second with the foils and first in the dual swords.

SIKI PROTESTS DECISION OF FIGHT WITH M'TIGUE ST. PATRICK'S DAY

Battling Siki, fighter of men and hardliquor, is all put out about the decision rendered against him in his St. Patrick's day battle with Mike McTigue, shown at the right in the picture. The Senegalese has filed a protest wit hthe French boxing commission. The inset is of Siki and at the right is Charlie Brennan, McTigue's trainer. The light-heavyweight crown of Europe is now atop the head of Mr. McTigue.

GOLF CLUBS PLAN FOR INTER-STATE TOURNEYS

FAIRBURY, Neb., March 19.—The golf clubs of southern Nebraska and northern Kansas are organizing for a series of tournaments to be played this season. There will be probably sixteen teams represented. As Fairbury is centrally located it is probable that the first tournament will be held here.

SIKI FILES PROTEST OF DUBLIN DECISION

Verdict of Paris Boxing Fans Varies According to Feeling for Senegalese—Carpentier Says "Incomprehensible."

PARIS, March 19.—Protest of Battling Siki over the decision which gave Mike McTigue his light heavyweight championship in Dublin Saturday was received today by the French boxing federation and is being considered.

The same decision was being unofficially considered by every boxing fan in Paris and the verdicts were varied according to personal feeling toward the Senegalese fighter. Siki's friends thought the decision terrible to the point of larceny while those who have no regard for the colored man, voted it a most desirable result.

Georges Carpentier, whom Siki knocked out when he won the light heavyweight championship, was present at the ringside. He termed the decision as "most incomprehensible."

WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME

THREE STRONG TEAMS IN EACH MAJOR LOOP

New York, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh Prospective National League Winners With Cubs Possible Darkhorse.

NEW YORK, March 19.—Both major leagues will be under way this time nevt month. Much will depend on how they start. Three teams in each league look so formidable that flattering at first may cause them to be a step behind next October.

New Yofik, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh look like the main rivals in the National league race. The Cubs might come thru as a dark horse, and they might even beat out the Cards.

Giants Maintain Strength.

John McGraw's known ability to keep his New York Giants from getting puffed under the hat band over their success will prevent the National league champions suffering from the effects of two pennant winnings. The Giants are a great "money" club, and altho they may not be stronger than they were last year, they are not weaker.

The pitching staff might bother McGraw some but he juggled his misfits around with such skill last season that he ought to be able to do the same thing this year, if the necessity arises.

Pat Moran has built up a most impressive team in the Cincinnati Reds and if he has any luck in getting away fast he will have a most prominent contender. The miserable start of the Reds last spring blew any chance they had for winning the pennant. If Rube Benton is allowed to pitch and is back in the form he is said to be the Giants can't loaf any day of the season.

Pirates Looking Better.

The Pittsburgh Pirates are potentially a fine ball club. Bill McKechnie put some steam in them for half of the race last season and the acquisition of Rebel Russell helped greatly. If they play as good in the early season as at the finish last year they will also be "in all the way."

Everyone is figuring Ty Cobb to furnish all the fireworks in the American league with the Detroit Tigers and he probably will do it. The St. Louis Browns have to be figured, altho with Sisler out of shape they will lose a lot of ground at the start. The White Sox might kick up some dust also, and Tris Speaker is "building."

"DIAMOND DUST FROM TRAINING CAMPS"

Johnson Will Strengthen Staff.

TAMPA, Fla., March 19.—The Senators pitching staff which made a poor showing in the Boston Braves 24 to 12 victory over Washington here Saturday, will be strengthened today by the arrival of Walter Johnson. His spring training has been delayed by the illness of his son.

Giants Split In Two Squads.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 19.—Regulars and rookies of the New York Giants have been split into the first and second teams. Under Cozy Dolan and Casey Stengel, the second team started on its tour.

Ruth Fails To Get A Hit.

NEW ORLEANS, March 19.—Babe Ruth failed to get a hit in four times at bat and fanned twice when the Yanks were beating the New Orleans Southern association club, 4 to 2.

Zach Wheat Will Sign.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 19.—Zach Wheat, captain and chief holdout of the Brooklyn Robins, is on his way to the camp to sign a contract, it was reported here.

Roush Is Last Holdout.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 19.—Eppa Rixey, a mild Red holdout, who signed last week, reported at the Red camp here today. This leaves Eddie Roush the only Cincinnati holdout.

Tygers Start After Rain.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 19.—After two days vacation caused by rain, the Detroit Tygers will resume practice today.

Blankenship's Knee Goes Bad.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 19.—Homer Blankenship's knee, which has been troubling him for several days, was ordered X-rayed by Manager Gleason. Blankenship doesn't recall having injured the knee and one physician believes it may be caused by enlarged tonsils.

Indians Meet Cincinnati Reds.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 19.—The Cleveland Indians, starting this week's series of five games with National league clubs, are determined to make it two straight from the Cincinnati Reds today.

Former Cub Pitcher Beats 'Em.

LOS ANGELES, March 19.—Percy Jones, former Cub pitcher, held his old team mates here Sunday and the Angels defeated Bill Killifer's training gang, 6 to 4.

Phillies Have Big Sick List.

LEESBURG, Fla., March 19.—Connie Mack's Athletics will rest today. Tomorrow the Mackmen will split into two teams and exhibition games will be played every day until the season opens.

Pirates Spend Day Golfing.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 19.—Manager McKechnie called off all training activities yesterday while eight of the Pirates enjoyed a game of golf.

AMATEURS WILL CONSIDER APPLICATIONS FOR BERTHS

A meeting of the Lincoln Amateur Baseball association will be held at the chamber of commerce Monday at 8 p. m. to accept the petitions of organizations that desire to become a part of the 1923 league. Eight teams will be admitted to the new league. Aggregations wishing to enter should appear at the meeting with the entry fee of $10.

The first six teams o fthe senior division have been selected by the corps area commander to compete in the national senior match which will be conducted thruout the United States this spring.

The treasury's "conscience fund" increased when an unidentified man returned $500 with this explanation: "The government having returned to me money which it unlawfully collected, I am enclosing $500 which I withheld from the government."

Hard for Young Player to Get Chance With New York Ball Clubs

Johnny Mitchell Had What Was Termed "Easiest Job in Baseball" Until He Was Sold to Boston Red Sox.

By Henry L. Farrell.

NEW YORK, March 19.—When young Johnny Mitchell was with the New York Yankees they used to say he had the easiest job in baseball.

He was substituting for Deacon Scott, the star shortstop of the club and the Deacon has been on the job every day in more than 1,000 games.

It was an easy job to earn money, but it was a tough assignment to get any place and Mitchell finally had to be traded to the Boston Red Sox to get a chance.

For two years he sat on the bench and two years are a lot to lose.

Every rookie in the country wants to get on one of the New York clubs and no rookie in the country has a chance when they do land with the Giants or the Yanks.

Miller Huggins, manager of the Yanks, has a characteristic aversion to young players. His notions about ball players can be gathered from the fact that he paid Frank Baker $10,000 for sitting on the bench last season and he wants him back again this season.

"Ready-to-Wear" Stars.

While John McGraw has turned lately to grabbing his stars in the "ready to wear" market, he has developed a lot of young ball players and it may be that prosperity and success are reducing the thrills and the ambition for any fame that he could get out of making youngsters.

The Giants at present are almost an all-star team. With the exception of the pitching staff there isn't a vacancy on the club for a youngster to shoot at.

Some Cobb the second, another Frisch or Eddie Collins might come along and get a place on the regular nine, but they come once in twenty years and they would have to come awfully strong to crowd out any of the boys that are now working for Napoleon.

The Giants have two of the nicest looking young players in the country on their payroll now—Freddy Maguire and Waddy McPhee. Maguire is a picture of Eddie Collins in face and form. McPhee is a young Princeton star and also an excellent prospect.

McGraw has always had the reputation of being willing to consider a few things from the ball players' point of view when it came to an argument between player and club.

The Giant boss proved this in a manner that probably was a terrible jolt to many club owners when he gave his opinion that Jack Bentley and other high priced ball players ought to get a part of the purchase price.

However, being as Mr. McGraw is always on the purchasing end of big moneyed deals, perhaps his view is not as magnanimous and as generous as it sounds.

Gave Morton Confidence.

Tris Speaker worked a little psychology effectually last year when he selected Guy Morton to pitch the opening game for the Cleveland Indians. Morton had nearly everything but confidence and that little stunt did more than anything else could do to make him believe in himself.

The same stunt was worked by McGraw at the San Antonio training camp of the Giants. Jimmy O'Connell, a $75,000 rookie from San Antonio had just reported and he was a little shy and nervous.

"Just take your time, young fellow, and don't get excited. You are the centerfielder of this ball club," McGraw said.

Two Teams from Nebraska Enter

MANHATTAN, Kan., March 19.—Letters of inquiry and applications for entry are pouring into the athletic department of K. S. A. C. for the first annual Missouri Valley interscholastic basketball tournament which will be held here March 23 and 24. The inquirers and entrants include high school basketball coaches from Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Already two teams from Nebraska have signified their intention of participating in the tourney. They are Wahoo, one of the strongest high school teams in the state, and Valparaiso, also a redoubtable aggregation.

The interstate correspondence so far has been heavier than the Kansas quota of replies, although more actual Kansas entries have been recorded. Arkansas City, Kas., was the first entry received by the athletic department.

Me Is I.

Billy is supposed to come directly home from Sunday school, but one Sunday he did not appear until dinner was over. He had evidently stopped to play, for his face and hands were dirty. His mother looked at him and said, "Well, whose little boy are you?"

"Why, I'm Billy," he replied.

"No, you are not Billy. He never came home with such a dirty face. I can't see who you are," she said.

"I tell you I is me. You ought to know my shape if you don't know my face."

Alvin Owsley, American legion commander, said in an address he was thru "pussyfooting" as to the conduct of the veterans' bureau, and that he intended to put legionnaires in Washington to watch its administration.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, March 19.—Grain prices advanced to new high levels at the opening on the Chicago board of trade today.

Light receipts and a higher Liverpool market strengthened wheat. Reports from the southwest indicated further crop damage as the result of the storm.

Higher Argentine quotations, light receipts and increased feeder demands featured the corn market. Country arrivals were light due to impassable roads.

Oats received better speculative support and there was some demand from southern traders.

Grain Market Opinions.

E. Bennett & Co: We look for continued strength with broadening of outside buying.

Hulburd, Warren & Chandler: The immediate situation revolves around the Chicago market where there is a large speculative long interest carrying the hedges against stocks of grain in various positions thruout the country and in Canada.

Logan & Bryan: Purchases on the setbacks are suggested.

Thomson-McKinnon: A continued export demand will be necessary to maintain prices from this level.

Harris, Winthrop & Co.: Exporters find it difficult to get corn.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co.: The markets appear to be moving into a stronger position.

Clement Curtis & Co: With export activity increasing, higher prices are likely.

Stein-Alstrin: All grains look higher.

Simpson: Any further advance in wheat the market may stimulate some realizing and have a tendency to cause some reaction. The advance in corn has been taken advantage by holders to realize. Any fair setbacks in wheat or corn think a purchase, as I think those who have sold out will be apt to replace on the declines.—Lamson.

Journal of Commerce Report.

CHICAGO, March 19.—Sentiment in grains is more bullish than for some time on the theory that the market has withstood the most depressing conditions in export circles without wavering. The outlook is for continued small receipts of coarse grains from the interior.—Lamson.

Hill of Little Devils.

On the north side of the Missouri, at a point in what is now known as Clay County, South Dakota, is a great natural curiosity, which is known as the Hill of Little Devils. The hill is a singular mound in the midst of a flat prairie, 300 yards long, 60 or 70 yards wide, and about 70 feet high. The top is a smooth level plain.

The Indians made this hill a great article of their superstition. They called it the Mountain of Little People, or Little Spirits. They believed it was the abode of little devils in human form, about 18 inches high, with remarkably large heads, and armed with sharp arrows with which they were very skillful. They were always on the watch to kill those who should have the hardihood to approach their residence. The tradition was that many had suffered from these little evil spirits.

The present residents of the region have preserved the Indian tradition, and Spirit Mound may be seen on modern maps of that country.—Detroit News.

Descendants of Fierce Tribes.

The Kara-Papakh are descendants of the fierce Mongolian tribes, men who came from Central Asia. Traces of the Tartars are found all thru southern Russie. In the Fourteenth Century the terrible Timurlane, a descendant of Ghengis Khan, established himself in western Turkestan under the title of the Grand Khan, and set up an empire of desolation from Syria to Delhi. It was the Tartars who drove the Turks out of Turkestan into Asia Minor in the Thirteenth century.

They wear big sheep-skin hats. They wear these hats whether the weather is cold or warm. The hats are first shaped on cardboard like a silk hat. Then they put cotton all around and wind it with gauze to hold the cotton tightly, thicken with stuffing, and over this they sew the sheepskin. Then a cheap lining is put inside.

The Kara-Papakh are sturdy camel drivers. They are in constant travel, carrying merchandise from the Volga district down to Bokhara, and can give a good account of themselves if attacked. Like the pony express riders of the American frontier days, they frequently encounter bandits.—

Family Ogre.

"I could tell those scientific(statistical guys something!" declared the Hyde Park man bitterly, rubbing his face in the wrong place after his friend from Woodlawn had remarked there was a smear of soot on it. "I know why there is one divorce to every four or five marriages these days. Most of them occur in winter, if you'll notice. It's the furnace that does it."

"Huh?" said the Woowlawn man vaguely.

"Furnace!" repeated his friend from Hyde Park. "You live in an apartment and of course think the warm air drops from heaven. But when you live in a house, as I do, you handle the job all by your lonesome.

"I suppose that a hermit residing by himself might manage to wrestle successfully with a furnace all winter and emerge in the springtime with merely a sort of haggard, moth-eaten expression similar to that of a hibernating bear when it first crawls out to look the scenery over—but not a married man! Imogene—"

"I have been waiting to hear her name," mentioned the Woodlawn man. "Sooner or later all your disasters get around to her door, poor woman!"

"There is nothing," went on the Hyde Park man emphatically, "that will convince a woman, any sort of a woman, that one cannot get prolonged heat from a furnace by just opening the drafts. It never occurs to her that coal must be shoveled on. I come home weary from my day of toil and find Imogene huddled in a fur coat on the davenport, with her feet tucked in. 'The fire is out,' she tells me, with a sad, reproachful look.

"If I were spending the season in Siam and the furnace here in Chicago went out, I'd get a cable from Imogene saying it was my fault. 'It was cold here,' she proceeds, 'so, of course, I went down and opened the door at the bottom in front and the draft in the back pipe, and in half an hour it was all dead. I guess you didn't fix it right this morning!'

"'Did you put in a shovel or so of coal?' I asked carefully. There is not the slightest use in my asking, because I know. But with the contrariness of human nature I cannot resist.

"'Why, no!' says Imogene in injured tones. 'I supposed you had fixed plenty of coal in it when you left this morning and every single thing I did was to open the drafts, so you can't blame me for the way your old fire acts!'

"That seems to be all there is to it, so I hasten to rebuild the fire, ruining a 25 cent wash on my shirt, a manicure and my disposition.

"And then after dinner, when I have got up from my easy chair four times to collect my pipe, my tobacco, my magazine and ash tray and finally am planted comfortably, Imogene says, 'Henry, dear, don't you think you'd better go down and shut up the furnace? It smells as tho something were burning and I am sure it is red hot!' Or if she doesn't say that she says, 'Don't you think you'd better open up the furnace a little, Henry? It seems cold here!' The point is that no matter what she says it means that I must get up and spill everything and never find it again and make two trips—if originally I go down to shut the furnace I have to go again somewhat later to open it; while if I basten down to open it I will have to close it again within the next hour.

"There never is a morning when I'm clearing the front steps in one jump in order to catch my train that Imogene doesn't come tearing to the door to shriek after me that I've forgotten to fix the furnace! We never get one foot out onto the front porch on our way to a soup-and-fish dinner party that she doesn't remind me I haven't valeted the fire.

"It went out this morning and when I went to build it in about five minutes time I found that woman had sold for her pet charity all the old boxes I have been intending to chop up for kindling for some time. In the course of the tender little discussion that ensued Imogene said yes, she had heard me say something about using the ax on 'em but she had concluded I was saving them for my old age or something in the future and decided to get rid of them as a useless incumbrance. I'll bet she chucked the soot on my face when I wasn't looking, too!"

"If she did it serves you right!" said the man from Woodlawn.—Chicago News.

Full Moon on Easter.

Easter Sunday falls this year on April 1, and there is a full moon on the same day, which the Prayer Book Easter Rule says can never happen. This apparent contradiction is due to the fact that the prayer book omits to mention that the moon that decides Easter Sunday is not the moon of the heavens, but a purely imaginary body called the Ecclesiastical moon, the uniform movements of which are regulated by a set of tables. The deciding phase of this artificial maan happens, according to the tables, this year on March 31, and because of this Easter Sunday falls on April 1, in spite of the real moon being full on the same day.

The tabular moon, being full on the same day all over the world, ensues a simultaneous observance of Easter Sunday wherever the Gregorian Calendar is used; whereas, if the full phase of the real moon were the deciding factor, it could happen on different days in, say, Europe and America, owing to the difference in time, and wolud occasionally mean thatt there would be a month's difference between Easter here and in Europe.

In other words, It having been decided that Easter Day shall always be the first Sunday after the full moon which happens next after March 21, then, if the full moon occurs on a Sunday, Easter Day is the Sunday following. But note that the full moon here referred to is the 14th day of a lunar month, reckoned from an ecclesiastical compilation, and not in accordance with the science of modern astronomy. Easter can not be earlier than March 22, or later than April 25.

MEN AND THINGS

One of the mysteries to most of the new voters is how it comes that while we talk big about allowing every community, whether it be a village, city, school district or what not, to run its affairs to suit the majority of the people, the principal business of a legislature seems to be to place restrictions about their freedom to do that very thing. The Nebraska house has passed a series of bills that takes from the majority of the people resident in these governmental sub-divisions the right to determine what local improvements they shall spend their own money for, and makes it possible for one more than a third of them to veto every such improvement. And yet most legislators are ready on a moment's notice to condemn centralization of power.

As a general proposition everybody is in favor of competition in every business except the one in which he is personally embarked. Perhaps the one exception is found in the ranks of workers. Most of them believe in unions largely because they realize that the continuance of the one to which they belong and which restricts competition in wages, is dependent upon the success of the union movement generally. They may have some mental reservations when they must pay the enhanced price of goods due in large part to enhanced wages for those who produced them, but that is neither here nor there. The result of the whole attitude is that we ave less and less competition so far as prices are concerned each year and higher and higher price levels. And every effort to prevent it seems foredoomed to failure.

Representative Hardin recently painted a picture of conditions in the bridge building business in the state that has all the verisimilitude of fact. He says that at each county bridge contract letting half a dozen or more companies appear by agents, submit bids and then all who don't get the contract cuss the fellow who did and their fate generally. After which they move over to another county, where another one of the group gets the contract and the cussing—all a part of fake competition and the contracts following, he said, a predetermined division of the counties. This has been going on a good many years, or at least these charges have been repeated annually for a long time. Has anything been done about it? There has not been.

Most of us smile when we read or recall that the ancient method of determining whehter an accused man was guilty was to give him a trial by combat. That is, pit him against somebody in a single-handed fight in which both were armed with deadly weapons. It seems strange that we should ever have imagined that justice could thus be served. But it is still stranger that we should now, when we know a lot more than was known then, retain the same thing in a different form. If you sit in on a trial in court nowadays you will find it is still a trial by combat, with attack and defense still pitted against each other. About the only difference now is that we allow one antagonist to fit himself out with better weapons, i. e., the better lawyer, something that was not permitted in the old days.

A Journal correspondent wants to know why the two cent passenger rate law is not enforced. Others who do not closely follow the news probably have wondered the same thing, now that the subject has been reviewed by the efforts of some of the preachers to be allowed to take the passes the railroads are pleadingly holding out. The constitution forbids the state legislature from enacting any law that takes away from a person his property. Therefore, if the legislature makes the rate of fare so low that it does not give a reasonable return on the investment in public utility property it is a law that the cours will not permit tobe enforced. When the wo cen fare law was passed the rate was remunerative. At the present time it is not, the courts have so held and the state, therefore, makes no effort to do a vain thing and a forbidden thing.

Listening to a musical recital in which the performer presents one heavy number after another, with no light or shade, is an experience parallel to hearing a man reciting the poetry of Browning without halting for an entire evening. Why do they do it? We wonder. Is it because the professional musician thinks it is his mission to make people like what he calls good music, and that the only way possible to bring this about is to get us under the spigot and then keep us there while he turns on the contents of the abrrel? Or is it because he plays what he does because he likes the numbers better than others?

Gold deposits have been discovered in the iron ore mountains near Corbach, Germany. One ton of clay earth analyzed as an experiment was found to contain 14 grams of gold. This aroused interest, because gold mines in operation net only 10 grams.
